Half Billion Cut in Relief HeldProbable By Woodrum

Hearings on Deficiency Bill for PWA to Open Today.

Congress' Trend Is for Reduction

Final Decision on Sum to Await Return of Roosevelt.

Elderman's cartoon today considers the budget dilemma—Page 8.

A $500,000,000 reduction in President Roosevelt's $1,500,000,000 relief estimates for 1938 is probable, Representative Clifton A. Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, predicted last night as his Appropriations subcommittee prepared to begin hearings today on a relief-deficiency bill to continue the Public Works Administration.

"With Congress in its present mood, I believe the President's figure may be cut $500,000,000," the Virginian said. He is acting chairman of the sub-committee which will begin taking testimony today.

Coupled with Woodrum's assertion was a statement during the day by Speaker Bankhead that he expects a final decision on the amount of the relief fund to "be held in abeyance" until President Roosevelt returns from his Gulf of Mexico fishing trip.

"I am sure that pride of opinion will not stand in the way of our goal of achieving needed Federal economies," he said.

"While I have not conferred with anyone on the issue over the week-end, I believe a final decision will be held in abeyance until President Roosevelt returns. Then I am sure that the President will be glad to see Congressional leaders and work out some method satisfactory to all, by which we can achieve the necessary economies."

The President is scheduled to return to Washington next week.

As the controversy over relief raged, Works Progress Administrator Harry L. Hopkins issued figures to back up his assertion State and local governments have carried their share of the relief burden; the Bureau of Labor statistics said 8,200,000 more now are employed than in March, 1933, and the United States Conference of Mayors warned that the $1,500,000,000 requested by Prseident Roosevelt will last only "until the middle of next winter."

For Federal employes, vitally concerned in the economy fight, E. Claude Babcock, president of the United Civil Service Employes, said the 15 per cent impoundment proposal of Representative Clarence Cannon (Democrat), of Missouri, is preferable to the 10 per cent horizontal cut urged by Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina.

Warns Against "Hysteria."

In discussing yesterday his plan for a return of all appropriation bills thus far passed to appropriate sub-committees, Woodrum renewed his warnings against "economy hysteria" and said individual items should be studied when cuts are made.

Even if it becomes necessary, to provide additional funds later, he went on, economies might be realized by compelling the WPA to spend cautiously, using a $1,000,000,000 basis instead of that urged by the President.

The Virginian said the House committee will open hearings today on a proposal to continue the PWA. On Wednesday the sub-committee expects to begin consideration of the works-relief recommendation proper.

Appropriation bills passed by the House already have been trimmed more than $100,000,000 under Presidential recommendations, he noted.

The Virginian Saturday asked the heads of 32 independent Federal establishments to resurvey money requirements for the next fiscal year and help Congress cut at least 10.

55,000,000 Troops Ready in 48 Lands; U. S. Ranks 19th

By the Associated Press.

A survey by American military authorities disclosed yesterday that at least 55,000,000 trained men can "spring to arms overnight" in 48 nations.

The regular army, reserves and other trained men in those countries, a survey shows, number 54,412,628, not including China's uncounted military forces, conservatively estimated as at least 1,000,000.

Of that grand total of trained fighting men 6,513,824 (not including China) actually are enrolled in the regular armies.

The United States now has an estimated 474,378 men in the Regular Army, National Guard, and trained Reserves, placing it nineteenth in potential fighting power in the ranking of the 48 countries.

Gen. Malin Craig, chief of staff, reported to Congress that on July 1 the Regular Army will reach its authorized peak of 165,000 men. On that basis, the survey shows, the United States will rank tenth in size of regular armies, below the British Empire, France, Germany, Italy, Japan, Poland, Soviet Russia, Rumania and Spain.

Church Federation Opens War To Ban Burlesques in Capital

LaRoe Committee Conducts Private Inquiry and Will Protest to Police; Lake Calls for 'Art and Propriety' in Shows.

Westbrook Pegler's column today is devoted to burlesque filth—Page 9.

Washington's Federation of Churches served warning yesterday that it intends to carry on here the effective drive New York churches have launched against burlesques.

"There is no sense in the Capital putting up with a condition New York will not tolerate," declared Wilbur LaRoe, chairman of the federation's committee on civic affairs which handles questions of public decency for the Protestant Church organization.

"We've been carrying on an investigation—my committee has—and we find some pretty terrible things going on," said the chairman, "and we're going to Maj. Brown (superintendent of Metropolitan Police) for a showdown."

LaRoe, a prominent lawyer and member of the District Parole Board, said his committee undertook to study the local burlesque situation "as a matter of course." He said it acted on its own initiative, and was not aware of similar activity on the part of any other group. But he thought yesterday that other religious and civic groups will fall in line when the movement gets under way.

But, as he discussed procedure against strip teasing in the Capital, Jimmy Lake, manager of Washington's burlesque theater, the Gayety, put the finishing touches on a new show, confident that "there will be no trouble."

"Burlesque just isn't the same thing here that it is in New York," he said. "There's been so much competition there, and one thing has led to another."

Manager Lake's new show at the Gayety yesterday afternoon turned out to be a variety program about 2½ hours long.

It was referred to as a strip-tease show, although the actual strip-

11 Unions Tell 6,000 to Join In Film Strike

Others Are to Vote on Walkout as Producers Are Assailed.

By the Associated Press.

Hollywood, May 2.—The strike front widened in the motion-picture industry tonight with 11 craft unions representing approximately 6,000 workers under orders not to report for work tomorrow.

If the walkout materializes when picture shooting resumes tomorrow, production at nine studios would be seriously impaired, if not halted altogether.

Individual unions of the Federated Motion Picture Crafts which voted today to abide by the Federation's strike call are the stationary engineers, molders, plumbers, costumers, cooks, studio utility workers, machinists and the boilermakers and welders' union.

Still other unions allied with the federation were to vote tonight and tomorrow on a strike call that would directly affect 10,000 of the 40,000 persons employed in making pictures.

Painters, scenic artists and make-up artists were ordered to strike last week.

The Screen Writers Guild, however, voted tonight to defer action pending a confernc with producrs Wednesday.

Picketing of studios was abandoned today, primarily because only a few pictures were in production.

Charles C. Lessing, representing the federated crafts, charged "the producers are subsidizing the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes as a company union.

"This unsavory organization supplied strikebreakers to the motion picture studios yesterday and today," he said. "Despite its membership in the American Federation of Labor, this organization, aided and abetted by the producers, has made a determined drive to take over the jurisdiction of the local union of the Brotherhood of Painters."

The Federated Crafts, with 18 unions, claims a total membership

Two Men Drowned As Ice Gives Way After Plane Lands

Presque Isle, Me., May 2 (U.P.).—Two airplane passengers were drowned and the pilot critically injured late today after they had made an emergency landing on ice-covered Portage Lake near here.

According to State police, those drowned were Dudley Lovely, of Mapleton, and Floyd Tompkins, of Presque Isle. The pilot, Forest Currier, of Ashland, escaped death.

Police said Currier brought the plane safely to the ice when the throttle jammed. With his two passengers, he alighted to look at the engine.

The "honeycomb" ice gave way, plunging the three men into the lake.

Both Lovely and Tompkins were drowned as they tried to swim to shore. Currier, police said, swam for more than an hour in the icy waters until rescued.

D.C. Policeman Suspended as Extortionist

Policeman Luther C. Wise, attached to the Tenth Precinct, was charged with extortion and suspended yesterday a little more than a month after he had been elevated to the rank of precinct detective.

Wise, who is 41 years old, was promoted April 1. He was taken into custody in front of a restaurant in the 1400 block Irving street about 2 a. m. by Inspectors Edward J. Kelly, Maurice Collins and Lieut. Walter H. Thomas. He was booked at the Tenth Precinct station and released under $500 bond.

Inspector Kelly, in whose district the arrest took place, said Wise was seen to accept two marked $5 bills from Fred Kosma, 119 Massachusetts avenue northwest, night manager of the Triumph Cafe. Kelly said Wise was approached after he left the place and the bills were found in his pockets.

Wise has two brothers on the force, Detective Sergt. John Wise and Private Charles Wise. "He has an outstanding record," Maj. Ernest W. Brown, chief of police, said when he promoted Wise.

Inspector Kelly said he with the other officers established a "plant" at the restaurant following a complaint from Kosma last Monday.

Kosma, according to Kelly, complained that a policeman demanded $5 a week from him "if he did not want to get in trouble." The demand came, Kosma said, because his liquor license had been suspended for a short time last week, Kelly reported.

Kelly, accompanied by Collins and Thomas, police night inspectors, went to the cafe Saturday night.

About 2 a. m., Kelly said, Wise entered the place, said a few words to Kosma, and the money changed hands.

When Wise left, Kelly said he approached with the other policeman and placed Wise under arrest.

Wise, according to Kelly, said he had borrowed the money from Kosma and that he was being "framed."

At the Tenth Precinct, Wise gave up his badge and gun and was formally charged on the arrest book.

The detective was appointed to the force December 1, 1927. He has been commended numerous times. He is married and lives at 1419 Trinidad avenue northeast.

Red Paint Daubed On Plymouth Rock; Pranksters Blamed

Plymouth, Mass., May 2 (A.P.).—Plymouth Rock, stepping stone to shore for the Pilgrims when they landed in 1620, gleamed today with a blotch of bright red paint.

"It might be the work of Communists," said James White, chairman of the board of selectmen. But some residents inclined to the belief it was the handiwork of youths with a misdirected sense of humor.

Later, Frederic W. Cook, secretary of state for Massachusetts, viewed the vandalism and asserted "I think this is a great sacrilege."

Managers of 15 'Frisco Hotels Do Chores as Strike Continues

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, May 2.—Sprucely-clad managers, only a little rumpled by a sleepless night of shooing patrons from the doors, ran their own elevators and fetched Melba toast to guests as the hotel workers' strike found 15 of the biggest hostelries virtually paralyzed.

The Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra, 111 strong, camped on its harp and violin cases in the railroad station, waiting for somebody to take them in.

Director Jose Iturbi and his managers were booked for a three-day stay, and didn't know until they reached the city that cooks, waiters, waitresses, dishwashers and bartenders had closed up the establishment where they had reservations.

Helen Mack, screen star, was marooned on the top floor of the famous old Palace Hotel. Her shapely legs ached from two return trips down eight flights of stairs to the lobby, and she was determined not to make another.

If anybody wants to see me, they can do the climbing," said she.

Two hundred-and-thirty-pound Oliver Hardy, the comedian who staged a sit-down strike in a plush lobby chair at the Sir Francis Drake last night when told he had to walk 20 stories to his room, was more cheerful.

The management moved him to the fifth floor today, and he made two excursions for breakfast to a "waffiery" across the street. Then he climbed to his hotel room and hung a "don't disturb" sign on the door.

Debutante Killed As Car Hits Pole; Once Resided Here

Salem, Mass., May 2 (A.P.).—Miss Margaret Pierce, 19, of Boston, attractive debutante, was killed here today when the automobile in which she was riding struck a telephone pole.

Roger F. Hooper, jr., of Boston, who police said was driver of the car, suffered severe cuts on the head and was in Salem Hospital.

Miss Pierce, graduate of the Beaver Country Day School, was the daughter of Mrs. Robert Herrick, jr., the former Mrs. Vinton Dahlgren Pierce, of Washington.

Margaret Pierce, Boston debutante killed yesterday, was 9 years old when her mother, the former Mrs. Vinton Pierce, married Robert Herrick and moved away from Washington. They had lived at 1804 R street northwest.

Cities Oppose Housing Link To Economy

Hold Bill's Death Would Be 'Penny Wise and Pound Foolish.'

Delegates Here Assert First-Year Expense Under $1,000,000.

By Russell Smith.

Representatives of 20 of the largest est American cities yesterday termed "a travesty" efforts to link the Wagner-Steagall housing bill with the current Federal economy drive.

Speaking through the American Federation of Housing Authorities after a two-day meeting here, these officials yesterday said expenditures required under the housing bill would amount to less than $1,000,000 in the 1938 fiscal year and to less than $3,500,000 in each of the two following years. For the next four years the expenditure would be less than $12,500,000 annually, it was said.

"To achieve this relatively picayune saving by killing the housing program," said these officials, "would be penny wise and pound foolish to the nth degree."

A suggestion by the United States Conference of Mayors that funds for the housing program be made available from idle Public Works Administration funds also came to light during the day. The mayors' group said in its official publication that "should the Wagner bill be enacted, it is possible that the required funds may be taken from the balance on hand at the PWA (amounting to around $150,000,000), thus eliminating the need for additional appropriations at this session."

PWA Funds "Ignored."

The PWA funds referred to have been virtually ignored by municipalities since current regulations requiring use of relief labor when grants are obtained were adopted. "PWA has not only been dead for some time but the corpse has now been partially embalmed," the mayors' organization yesterday reiterated.

Accompanying the statement of the cities' representatives here yesterday was a brief comment of the Housing Authorities Federation in which the federation charged Treasury officials with "misrepresentations and distortions" in statements attributed to them in newspaper quotations.

The federation said:

"We want the public to know the facts about what the Wagner-Steagall housing program costs, and we welcome information from any source. But we deplore and condemn the misrepresentations and distortions with respect to the bill contained in statements attributed to various Treasury officials.

Various Treasury spokesmen have been quoted in the press and elsewhere to the effect that the bill might cost the Federal Government $600,000,000 a year in annual rental subsidies by 1996. That would be possible only if Congress itself repeatedly legislated additional loans and grants for new low-rent housing construction comprising a program almost 20 times as large as the maximum provided under the Wagner-Steagall bill, or $20,000,000,000 in all. The Wagner-Steagall bill authorizes and makes financial provisions for loans for only $1,000,000,000 worth of housing construction, all of which are returned with interest. To say that the rental subsidies on a program of this size might cost the Government $600,000,000 a year is a transparent absurdity."

"Tremendous Lag" Hit.

To this the officials of the 20 cities concerned added:

"Millions of people absolutely must have housing. The Administration's long commitment to a housing program becomes more necessary of fulfilmen each day. * * * Every day the tremendous lag in residential construction makes it more apparent that without housing there can be no complete economic recovery.

"Housing by universal consent represents the most economical way of doing what everyone knows must be done. It is the choice method for reducing public expenditure by the progressive expansion of private activity, for cutting down the relief rolls by affording permanent and worthwhile activity, and for tying up every dollar of expenditure with genuine productive activity. Compared with relief, housing is cheaper for the Government, better for business and infinitely more just to the underprivileged who, in one way or another, must be helped."

The federation said the following

Labor Unrest Held on Rise In Germany

Foreign Policy Analyst Cites Government's Pleas as Evidence.

Gain in Use of Luxuries, But Little Betterment for Worker Found.

Read "Hitler's War on Religion," an editorial—Page 8.

By the Associated Press.

Discontent is growing among the German work ing classes, the Foreign Policy Association reported yesterday.

"That the Nazi regime has to some extent lost its hold on the masses," said John C. DeWilde, of the association's research staff, "is indicated by the frequency of government appeals and exhortations.

"Discontent is probably greatest among the working classes, where it has occasionally provoked spontaneous but scattered outbreaks of passive resistance."

At the same time, DeWilde reported, German bank deposits have increased, the national income has risen, and the general public has increased its consumption of luxuries.

Deposits in savings banks rose from 11.4 billion marks in 1932 to 14.6 billion at the end of 1936. The money income of the German people jumped from 45.2 billion marks to about 61.5 billion during the same period, DeWilde said.

Radios, Autos Increase.

In "luxury" purchases, the number of radios owned in Germany rose from 4.31 million at the end of 1932 to 8.17 million at the close of 1936. The licensing of motor cars increased from 41,118 to 213,248 during the four years. Motion-picture theater attendance increased 36 per cent and the number of railway trips increased 24 per cent.

"At first glance," DeWilde said, "it might appear that the working classes have been among the most favored elements of the Third Reich. The 1936 income from wages and salaries totaled 34.9 billion marks, as compared with only 26 billion four years before—an increase of 33 per cent.

"This rise, however, is not due to an advance in individual wages and salaries, but to the re-employment of several million idle workers.

"The economic freedom of the worker has been greatly restricted under the Hitler regime. The government has not only deprived workers of the right to bargain collectively and to strike, but has limited freedom of movement."

Average Pay Lower.

It would appear, DeWilde said, that employes have been working longer hours and at lower average pay than in 1932. Taxes and state contributions assessed against the worker's wage now represent about 35 per cent of his average earnings, DeWilde added.

On the brighter side, he said the vast majority of workers feel more secure "because they have been freed from the haunting fear of losing their jobs."

Despite a semblance of unity, DeWilde said foreign observers were finding much more grumbling than formerly. But, he concluded, the Hitler regime is not in danger from it because it does not take the form of opposition in principle and because the government is prepared to "nip in the bud any organized movement of dissent."

Connie Boswell Saved From Fire By Buddy Rogers

Los Angeles, May 2 (U.P.).—Charles (Buddy) Rogers, actor and band leader, saved Connie Boswell, stage and radio singer, from possible severe burns tonight when he beat out flames consuming the cot on which she was sleeping between performances in the downtown theater.

Neither Miss Boswell nor Rogers was burned.

After finishing her act, the partially crippled singer retired to her upstairs dressing room and was taking a nap when she suddenly awoke to find the cot smoldering.

Her screams brought Rogers, who beat out the fire.

10 Men Rescued As Ship Wrecks

Atlantic City, N. J., May 2 (U.P.).—Ten Philadelphians, all men, were rescued from the ocear tonight after the motor of their 37-foot cabin cruiser went dead and the boat was dashed against the Steel Pier.

Occupants of the craft jumped overboard when it began to break up, and clung to the side of the boat for more than a half hour before police and pier attendants could pull them to safety. All were treated for exposure. The boat was salvaged by coast guardsmen.

Firemen from Houghton, Hanock and Hurontown assisted in fighting the blaze.

Spain Accuses Italy, Germany As U. S. Maps Neutrality Rules

New Charges Against Powers for Aiding Rebels Made by Embassy Here; State Department Drafting Bans.

Reiterated charges of German and Italian participation in the current Spanish insurgent drive in Spain's Basque provinces were made on behalf of the Basque autonomous government by the Spanish Embassy here last night.

The statement came as the State Department's office of arms and munitions control prepared to enforce the new, more stringent provisions of the American neutrality law against both insurgents and loyalists.

Acting in accordance with one of two proclamations issued by the President when he signed the new neutrality measure aboard a destroyer off the Texas coast, the office of arms and munitions control was working toward enforcement of prohibitions against:

Export of arms, ammunition and implements of war (designated by the proclamation) to any of the belligerent factions in Spain, or to neutral countries for transshipment to Spain. The expanded arms list includes several more poison gases, propellants and explosives and, in addition to war vessels, includes armor plate for their construction.

Travel on Spanish vessels. (Few Spanish ships sail from American ports now and that prohibition is chiefly applicable in European waters).

Granting of loans, buying of bonds, or engaging in other financial transactions beneficial to the belligerent factions.

Attack Opens On Constitution Of Free State

Called 'Political Window Dressing;' Officials of Ulster Hostile.

By the Associated Press.

Dublin, May 2.—The Irish Free State's proposed new constitution was appraised critically tonight as a document which would not bring about any radical or immediate change in political or economic conditions.

Some observers term it "political window dressing" and said the new instrument was only a rewrite of the existing constitution in the light of amendments which have been made.

Many sought an answer to the failure of the instrument to mention either Great Britain or the King.

The Irish Times, which described the document's attitude toward the King as "churlish," suggested the country under the new title of Eire "is neither fish, flesh nor even good red herring."

"There is no king, there is no commonwealth, there is not even a suggestion either of them ever existed," the paper said, "and yet one has an uneasy feeling the new constitution does not tell the whole truth."

Attaked in Ulster.

"Has there been no understanding with Britain in the matter?

"Surely the new constitution abrogates the treaty of 1921 by which the Irish Free State was accorded the same status as the other British dominions) and, if it does not abrogate it, what on earth does it all mean?

"It does not tell us whether we are in the commonwealth or out of it. Can it be that (President Eamon) De Valera does not really know?"

The integration of the whole of Ireland—the Irish Free State and Ulster—has been the eventual goal of President De Valera, but Ulster spokesmen maintained their opposition.

Milne Barbour, Northern Ireland's minister of commerce, said: "Our position is perfectly clear and safe. We in the north have a deep-rooted pride in our British citizenship and a passionate attachment to the crown. We look with curiosity on the new Free State constitution."

Sir Basil Brooke, Northern Ireland's minister of agriculture, addressing a group at Hillsborough, said:

"The new constitution implies from the south of Ireland that Ulster at some time or other may be incorporated in another state and disunited from Britain. * * * If by some

Mrs. Simpson's Divorce to Be Absolute Today

Two-Minute Formality to Free Her to Marry Windsor.

By the Associated Press.

London, May 2.—A two-minute formality tomorrow will remove the last fetter preventing the marriage of the dark-eyed American born Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson and the Duke of Windsor.

Her decree of divorce from Ernest Aldrich Simpson is expected to be made final about 10:30 o'clock tomorrow morning (4:30 a. m. Eastern standard time) in the divorce court here.

This brief new chapter in the world-famous love story in which a king gave up the rule of nearly 500,000,000 subjects for "the woman I love" will be written nine days before the bells of Westminster Abbey ring out the tidings of the coronation of a new King.

When his brother, George VI, is crowned, the duke is expected to rejoin Mrs. Simpson, whom he has not seen since the critical days of last December when he gave up his throne.

The application for Mrs. Simpson's final decree is one of 86 in tomorrow's court list.

The procedure is a mere formality.

An officer of the court will announce the fact there are applications in a specified number of suits in the list.

Then the presiding judge will ask: "Does anyone appear to show cause why the decrees should not be pronounced absolute?"

After a slight pause in order to give the opportunity for any intervention in any one of the suits, the judge then announces:

"Then I pronounce the decrees to be made absolute."

Friends of the duke and Mrs. Simpson expect them to be married quietly next month.

The six months since Mrs. Simpson obtained her decree nisi in Ipswich actually ended April 27. This is the period required before a conditional divorce decree may be made absolute.

Cross Burned Near Duke.

Saint Wolfgang, Austria (Monday), May 3 (U.P.).—Austrian Nazis, who have been conducting a whispering campaign against former King Edward, burned a huge wooden swastika outside his villa last night while villagers gave him a farewell serenade.

Squads of police were sent into the Alpine foothills around Lake Saint Wolfgang with orders to arrest the Nazi demonstrators.

Edward, who will leave today or tomorrow for Monts, France, to join Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson and arrange for their early marriage, ignored the incident.

London Works Toward Climax With Coronation 9 Days Away

By the Associated Press.

London, May 2.—With less than two weeks left before the gilded state coach, drawn by eight red-harnessed horses, rolls through the streets to Westminster Abbey, London is working itself into a crescendo of last-minute preparations.

The city, it is now apparent, will be brilliant as a jewel the night of May 12, when, with the King and Queen crowned, the public will give itself over to celebration.

The ordinarily gray tangle of London streets will be lavishly illumined, with more than 200 buildings floodlit. For the first time in its 900 years, the Tower of London will be spotted with powerful lights. Other buildings to bask in a similar glare will be Buckingham Palace, the Abbey, St. James' Palace, Hampton Court, and Windsor Castle.

Meanwhile, government intervention to end London's strike of 25,000 busmen was demanded by Dr. Alfred Salter, Laborite M. P., at a rally of 30,000 workers in Hyde Park today.

His sentiments were echoed by footsore Londoners, many of whom trudged home after spending a sunny Sunday inspecting the city's elaborate coronation decorations.

Subway stations near the park were jammed and two, the Marble Arch and Oxford Circus stations, were closed temporarily to enable incoming passengers to fight their way out through the crowds waiting to board the trains.

Last-minute preparations are being hurried for the legions of royal and distinguished guests who must Rebels at Las Arenas, Block Basques' Road to Sea.

British Will Carry On Work of Mercy

Refugees to Be Given Aid Despite General's Note.

By the Associated Press.

St. Jean de Luz, France, May 2.—Spanish insurgent Generalissimo Francisco Franco lodged a vigorous protest with Great Britain tonight against the evacuation of refugees from Bilbao as his troops were reported to have smashed through the last line of Basque defenses on the Bay of Biscay coast.

Diplomatic sources, who said the forces under Franco's northern commander, Gen. Emilio Mola, reached the gates of Las Arenas, between Bilbao and the sea, reported the delivery of the insurgent note to the British embassy in Hendaye.

Franco charged in it, they said, that evacuation would aid the Basque defense of the seaport and provincial capital in violation of the European "hands-off Spain" accord.

He maintained Bilbao was a military objective and neutral nations had no right to remove the population as this would eliminate a burden from the Basques and permit them to concentrate on fighting.

British Ignore Protest.

British sources said they were proceeding, nevertheless, with their plans to rescue a number of women and children from Bilbao—with or without Franco's consent—on humanitarian grounds.

Diplomatic dispatches said nine British freighters at Bilbao were ready to leave or had left for Bordeaux, France, with nearly 5,000 refugees.

Exact information was kept secret as a means of protecting the vessels.

British warships were declared ready to protect the rescue ships outside Spanish waters in case the insurgent leader attempted to enforce his protest with action.

The first ships bearing refugees were expected to reach France tomorrow.

The evacuation, however, will be less extensive than contemplated originally, as diplomats pointed out the insurgent troops were closing in on the capital and planes were bombing the port.

Franco has announced the intention, however, not to bomb or shell the center of Bilbao, but his planes attacked port factories today as military objectives.

From Las Arenas the insurgents have only to move up wide roads along the Nervion River, which runs into the heart of Bilbao, only 8 miles away.

The dispatches described Gen. Emilio Mola's troops leading the advance as "German and Italian."

French Will Aid.

Insurgent capture of Las Arenas would leave the Basque armies and Bilbao's 350,000 inhabitants only one road out of the city—that along the western bank of the Nervion to Castro Urdiales on the coast, where a road to Santander begins.

The British destroyer Faulknor was scheduled to leave for Bilbao tomorrow morning to evacuate the staff of the British consulate. The French destroyer Terrible also was preparing to remove the French consul in Bilbao and French citizens.

The United States destroyer Kane was expected to reach the north coast of Spain Wednesday. William E. Chapman, United States consul in Bilbao, who has been making his headquarters in St. Jean de Luz, said there were "no continental Americans in Bilbao, only Filipinos and Puerto Ricans." He said he was not planning to return to Bilbao from St. Jean de Luz.

Say Ship Struck Mine.

Hendaye, France, May 2 (A.P.).—The Spanish insurgents today admitted loss of the strongest unit of their navy, the 16,140-ton battleship Espana, but denied it was sunk by the enemy.

The Espana went down Friday after striking one of the insurgents' own floating mines while chasing a British blockade runner off Santander, declared a communique issued at Salamanca, seat of the insurgent regime.

The Espana's entire crew got off safely in small boats to the destroyer Velasco, said the communique. (The Espana's usual complement was 854 officers and men.)

In the land war for Bilbao both sides acclaimed success. Basque reports asserted that Saturday's

Court Reform Foes Will Hear Four Senators

Copeland, Byrd, McCarran, Gerry Will Speak at Philadelphia.

By the Associated Press.

Senator Copeland (Democrat), New York, said yesterday four Democratic members of the Senate will speak in Philadelphia, May 10, at a mass meeting "organized as a protest against the President's plan to pack the Supreme Court."

The speakers will include Copeland and Senators Byrd, of Virginia; Gerry, of Rhode Island, and McCarran, of Nevada. McCarran was described by Copeland as the only one of the group who had declared himself against the court plan.

The New Yorker asserted the meeting was being organized by the same group of court plan opponents who backed a similar demonstration in New York at Carnegie Hall earlier in the year. It will commemorate the first constitutional convention in Philadelphia 150 years ago and will be scheduled on a radio network.

Aid of Churches Sought.

Yesterday's developments in the court controversy included an effort to have the question discussed from the Nation's pulpits.

The committee for Constitutional Democracy, Inc., announced it has asked 100,000 clergymen to preach sermons on constitutional guarantees.

Russell L. Rice, secretary, said he had sent letters to the churchmen in the last fortnight suggesting they set aside Sunday, May 23, for pulpit sermons on the 150th anniversary of the Constitution and its guarantees of religious liberty.

In a series of letters and sermon material sent out Rice said "patriotic clergymen" were "protesting against packing the Supreme Court."

Not Trying to Dictate.

"It is not our purpose to even try to tell you how to conduct your services. We are merely making this comment in the hope that you will feel the urge to defend the Constitution in your remarks against the kind of usurpation that now confronts it."

Rice said 10 per cent of the New England clergymen who had received the letter had responded favorably to the proposal of a sermon on the Constitution and the Supreme Court.

He said his committee was organized last February and was as much interested in the President's plan for reorganizing the executive department as the court plan.

Among directors of the committee he listed Prof. Charles M. Bakewell, of Yale University; Hugh M. Alcorn, Hartford, Conn., attorney, and Crandall Mackey, a Virginia publisher.

The Supreme Court may decide constitutionality of unemployment insurance features of the social security act today.

The court is expected to recess for the summer either on May 31 or June 7.

Two phases of the law are involved. Unemployment insurance, as represented in the Alabama law and the Federal pay roll tax, was argued a month ago and may be ready for announcement today. Old-age annuities, as represented in a test originating in Boston, has yet to be argued.

On many New Deal tests this term where more than one case has been presented, the court has waited to decide all at the same time. Such procedure in the social security tests would delay decision until just before adjournment. There is nothing to prevent the court, however, from ruling on unemployment insurance immediately as it seeks to clear its docket.

James Dooling to Fight Tammany Ouster Drive

New York, May 2 (AP).—James J. Dooling, ailing Tammany Hall leader, returned to New York late today and indicated any drive to oust him would be met with vigorous resistance. Dooling, improved in health after an eight-week vacation in Florida, said he would confer during the week with Tammany district leaders on the leadership situation.

Members of the executive committee are divided in their opinions as to whether Dooling is the man to lead Tammany in a fight to regain control of city government this year. Nevertheless, dissatisfied Tammanyites have thus far been unable to unite in an effort to oust Dooling.

Greta Garbo Expected To Ignore $10,500 Suit

Los Angeles, May 2 (U.P.).—Trial of a $10,500 recovery suit against Greta Garbo is slated to open in superior court tomorrow.

Appearance of the Swedish star was considered highly doubtful despite threat of plaintiff's counsel, James J. McCarthy, to ask for a bench warrant for her arrest should she disregard a subpena. Studio spokesmen said they had no idea whether she would attend. David Scharatter is suing the actress to recover money he claims he loaned her in 1924. In a deposition, she denied the charge.

New Faces in Congress.

Kentucky Representative Says Harlan's Gore Is Exaggerated

REPRESENTATIVE NOBLE J. GREGORY.

Noble J. Gregory Succeeded Brother in Congress Seat; Believes in Keeping Open Mind; Voted Against Anti-Lynching Bill.

By Liam Lenihan.

"Bloody Harlan" stories to the contrary, genial Noble J. Gregory, from the west country of Kentucky, allows as how his folks back home are "right peaceful and civilized."

The blond, blue-eyed, youthful Representative from the Blue Grass State's first district, which he calls "the Gilbraltar of Democracy," was born in Mayfield, Ky., August 30, 1897.

He inherited his political flair from a family in politics half a century, and as campaign manager and organizer for his late brother, whom he succeeds and who had served five terms as Representative from his district.

Educated in the private and public schools of his home town, Gregory for 20 years has been cashier and trust officer in a local bank. He threw his hat in the ring when his brother died and was elected by a sweeping majority of 35,000 votes.

He as no pet political peeves. . . made no pledges and expects to remain in that frame of mind. "It's not good to come with one's mind made up," he commented yesterday. "As for pledges, I will not be hamstrung by anyone."

Avoiding comment on the court reorganization plan, Gregory said he voted against the anti-lynching bill "with the greatest of pleasure." Not that he is in favor of mob justice—quite the contrary. He merely felt that the bill did not "accomplish any purpose."

He is keenly interested in the Tennessee Valley Authority and in the proposed erection of a hydraulic dam at Gilbertsville, Ky., that would give the Tennessee River a 9-foot navigable depth. He also disputed published reports that TVA dams did little to check flood ravages.

A member of the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, Gilbert is loaded down with work. He has no particular hobbies. He plays golf well enough however, to shoot in the lower eighties.

The week-end brought no indication of agreement between House and Senate leaders over the method of proposed economy.

Senate Majority Leader Robinson held to his support of a proposal to make a horizontal cut of 10 per cent in all appropriations. The House Democratic leader, Representative Rayburn, of Texas, favored legislation to allow the President to impound 15 per cent of all appropriations, releasing the money at his discretion.

Two Western Senators—Borah (Republican), of Idaho, and King (Democrat), of Utah, expressed disapproval of both economy proposals.

Borah said he was "not deeply interested" in either the flat 10 per cent plan somewhat better.

King asserted the burden of trimming governmental cost "rests on Congress," and warned:

"Already the public debt is so great and the threat of additional bond issues so imminent that the market price of bonds fell and there is some concern as to whether additional issues might result most unfavorably to our business and economic structure."

Declaring that States and cities spent $1,245,000,000 for relief in 1936 as compared with $338,000,000 in 1933, Hopkins said, figures for 1937 will show a still larger total, and "more and more" will be spent in 1938. He said he did not believe more than $100,000,000 was spent in 1929.

States Spent Nearly 3 Billions.

Hopkins said State and local expenditures for relief, excluding money spent on social security programs, amounted to more than $2,900,000,000 during the years 1933 through 1936.

His figures showed $1,700,000,000 was used for direct and work relief; $1,250,000,000 for work programs, of which $85,000,000 was used on the former Civil Works Administration projects, $245,000,000 on WPA projects and $925,000,000 for Public Works Administration projects.

In discussing the Labor Statistics Bureau's estimate 34,100,000 were employed in the United States in March, 1937, Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins said, "The fact that the estimate for March, 1937, is only about 1,240,000 below that for March, 1929, does not mean that unemployment has been reduced to within 1,240,000 of the 1929 level.

"A very considerable increase in the number of employables has taken place during the past eight years, due to normal population growth." She also said adjustment to new census materials has increased employment figures over previous years.

Measure Moves to Vote.

Despite Treasury warnings and the economy drive the Wagner-Steagall bill thus far has moved steadily toward a vote in Congress. A report is expected soon by the Senate committee on education and labor, which has finished hearings, and hearings are to start soon in the similar House committee.

The Federal Housing Administration yesterday announced the appointment of two deputy administrators. One of them, Miles L. Colean, will be in charge of large scale housing operations, and the other, Charles C. McGehee, will direct relations with other Government departments.

Colean, a native of Peoria, Ill., is 38 years old, was an architect in New York and Chicago, and has been director of the FHA technical division since the FHA was organized. McGehee was born in Atlanta, Ga., in 1906. After engaging in the real estate and insurance business in that city he became regional director of the FHA there. Since January 15, 1937, he has been special assistant to the administrator.

Alien Policing Called Newest Problem in U.S.

Officials Favor Law to Deport Many Not Now Reached.

By the Associated Press.

Alien policing rather than immigration control is the newest problem of the Immigration Bureau, officials said yesterday.

They expressed hope that Congress soon would adopt a House bill providing for deportation of certain aliens not reached by present statutes and for exercise of limited discretion in deportable cases where special hardship might be worked on individuals.

Acting Immigration Commissioner Edward J. Shaughnessy said the number of aliens in the United States had decreased so materially in recent years that "by the end of the next decade an alien may be a comparatively scarce individual."

Recalling that in the last seven years 498,238 aliens had entered this country, compared with 4,295,510 the previous ten years, Shaughnessy said:

"We need more law to give us authority, on the one hand, to deport many criminal aliens now subject to deportation and, on the other hand, to permit aliens of good character who are here in more or less technical violation of law to remain, particularly in cases where they have American citizen families and where deportation would amount to making public charges of these dependent relatives until such time as they can reach an age when they will be self-sustaining."

The Dies bill, approved by the House Immigration Committee, provides, among other things, for deportation of these four additional groups of aliens: Violators of State narcotic laws if they are not merely addicts; those convicted and sent to prison within five years after passage of the act; alien smugglers, and those convicted of carrying concealed weapons.

Labor Department statistics show immigration to this country in the last fiscal year totaled 36,329, compared with the total authorized quota from all countries of 153,774. Quota immigrants totaled only 18,675.

Since enactment of the so-called "exclusion laws" of 1924, immigrants from Asiatic countries have dwindled to a negligible number. For the five years before these laws were passed, Chinese and Japanese immigrants averaged 3,875 and 7,461, respectively. For the next five years the annual average dropped to 1,230 and 638 and for the 1936 fiscal year the total dropped to 42 and 62.

Rail Stockholders Request Protection

Asserting the Interstate Commerce Commission "has it within its power to prevent a gigantic fraud upon the many holders of securities of the St. Louis Southwestern" Railway, Louis E. Meyer, of New York, chairman of the Stockholders Protective Committee of that road, yesterday charged the Southern Pacific with forcing the Southwestern into reorganization.

In support of a petition to the commission requesting an investigation and report "regarding the circumstances leading up to the filing by the St. Louis Southwestern Railway Co. of a petition for its reorganization," Meyer said:

"Of greater importance than any other single fact to holders of securities of St. Louis Southwestern is the matter of the traffic relations between Southern Pacific and St. Louis Southwestern and the treatment that St. Louis Southwestern may expect to receive from Southern Pacific in the future. Southern Pacific, figuratively speaking, has its hand on the faucet. It may turn on or off traffic and cause to flow over St. Louis Southwestern just as much or as little traffic as it pleases, I claim, however, that according to well-recognized legal principles Southern Pacific is under a duty to do its best for St. Louis Southwestern and to act not solely in its own interest but in the interest of all of the holders of securities of St. Louis Southwestern. Actuated by the ulterior motive of forcing the road into reorganization proceedings, this, I claim, Southern Pacific deliberately failed to do."

State Medical Aid In West Planned

Boise, Idaho, May 2 (AP).—In an endeavor to protect the health of low-income families, communities in Washington, Oregon and Idaho, encouraged by State units of the Federal Resettlement Administration, are studying the organization of co-operative medical associations.

There are, explained L. K. Saum, co-operative specialist of the Idaho Resettlement Administration, two objectives:

1. Providing medical facilities in communities now without the services of a physician or nurse. Typical is a proposed co-operative at Grandview, in Idaho's thinly settled Owyhee County, where a doctor may be "imported" to serve 300 ranch families.

2. Making it possible for low-income families in communities where physicians are available to finance proper medical attention. Such a co-operative would be the Idaho Falls Rural Health Service, Inc., which 200 eastern Idaho farm families have formed.

President Has Quiet Sabbath; Texas Governor Visits Yacht

Executive Cruises Off Port Aransas; Spends Day Reading and Resting in Preparation for Fishing Excursion Today.

By the Associated Press.

Galveston, Tex., May 2.—President Roosevelt, with ideal weather prevailing, spent a quiet Sabbath today cruising on the U. S. S. Potomac off Port Aransas, about 200 miles southwest of Galveston.

Gov. James V. Allred of Texas called on the President today while the Potomac lay at anchor. A message from the yacht received at 8:19 p. m. (8:19 p. m. E. D. T.) said:

"Spent quiet Sunday aboard Potomac. Comfortable anchorage off Port Aransas. Got grand rest in preparation for tomorrow's fishing. Sea rough this afternoon."

Already tanned from his journey on the destroyer Moffett from New Orleans and as a result of his first fishing yesterday, the vacationing Executive devoted today to sunning himself on deck and reading in his cabin.

A few mackerel were caught yesterday from a 40-foot motor whaleboat. Word from the party today was that no attempt had yet been made for tarpon.

Two Navy seaplanes were being sent here from Pensacola, Fla., to replace the two damaged yesterday when a strong wind caused them to drag anchor and collide. They will be used to take mail from White House headquarters here and return any the President wishes to dispatch to Washington.

The accident to the two planes, whose wings were damaged, caused officials to use an automobile and a small boat to transmit the neutrality bill to the Potomac.

Arrrival of the measure, which was signed shortly afterward, found the President reading a book in his cabin, still dressed in old gray trousers and a white polo shirt.

He said he had enjoyed the trip down from New Orleans and had had good weather, except for some fog.

mischance we would be separated from that market (England) it would be a very sad day for all of us who are keen and anxious to see agriculture progress."

The new instrument is to be offered for parliamentary ratification in June and then be submitted to the people in a plebiscite.

The Irish' Independent declared De Valera's followers will be sadder and wiser men when they have searched in vain for signs of the promised millennium at hand.

The Free State's defense minister, Frank Aiken, speaking at Dundalk, declared:

"The constitution indicates the hope and firm resolve of the people for an Ireland free, undivided and Gaelic."

A Cosgrove (opposition) deputy, Martin Nally, however, described the instrument in a speech at Mayo as "the greatest fake and humbug ever known."

20 Families Flee In $95,000 Blaze

Toledo, Ohio, May 2 (AP).—Fire tonight leveled the Kelsey & Freeman Lumber Co., destroyed four homes, damaged two others and threatened an entire neighborhood.

Fire Chief Fred Schlorf gave a preliminary estimate of $95,000 damage.

A civilian and a fireman were overcome and two other firemen were burned. The fire forced a score of families to evacuate their homes.

The cause of the fire was not immediately determined, although it was reported to fire officials that boys had been playing in the lumber yard a short time before the fire started.

Army Cabinet May Disregard Japanese Vote

Political Crisis Is Certain, Regardless of Action on Election Defeat.

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, May 2.—The army-supported cabinet of Gen. Senjuro Hayashi, overwhelmingly defeated in Friday's general election, tonight faced a choice between resignation and an attempt to continue in power in disregard of the electorate's rebuke.

Either decision, political authorities believed, would mean a new period of internal tension. Resignation would involve the crisis attending selection of a new premier and cabinet. An attempt to continue in power would mean another election, with intensified political bitterness.

Final returns showed the parties avowedly opposed to the Hayashi cabinet retained about 400 of the 466 seats in the new House of Representatives. Only 11 members were committed definitely to support of the government.

No government in Japan's history has received such a defeat at the polls. Political writers compared it to Gov. Landon's defeat by President Roosevelt.

(In Western countries with the parliamentary system such a setback would be followed almost automatically by the government's resignation. In Japan's short parliamentary history, dating from 1890, this rule has not been established. The government, controlling the election machinery, usually wins.

(A previous government defeat, that of Count Keigo Kiyoura in 1924, led to a cabinet resignation, but that one instance was not sufficient to establish a precedent.)

In political circles opinion was growing that Gen. Hayashi could continue in power only on the plea that a national emergency exists which demands early solution and quick decisions, making dangerous the delay involved in fresh elections.

Friday's election was to name a new house succeeding that Hayashi had dissolved March 31, within a few hours of the close of the session. The large vote against him was in part expression of popular disapproval of that action.

Providence Pact Accepted.

Providence, R. I., May 2 (AP).—Striking employes of three Providence hotels by a vote of 203 to 85 agreed today to accept a new compromise offer by the managements.

Under the agreement, which was sent back to the managers for their signatures, the 600 strikers will resume their posts in the Biltmore, Narragansett and Crown hotels tomorrow morning. The settlement averted a threatened strike of bartenders in the three hotels.

Provisions of the agreement include a day off in seven, a 48-hour week for women, a 54-hour week with a 9-hour day for men and union recognition.

Answer to Riddle Of Race Found in ComparingOrgans

A partial answer to the hitherto unsolved enigma of race has recently been found by Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, curator of physical anthropology in the Smithsonian Institution.

By use of new scientific methods, which he has grouped under the name "typogney," Dr. Hrdlicka has segregated those body organs which most distinguish race. These are the nose, hands, feet, skull, palate, lower jaw, the sternum, first rib, scapula, sacrum and the long bones.

By careful investigation, Dr. Hrdlicka has found the measurements of these body organs fall into five distinct groups. As an example, he points out, the cross section of the main leg bones of thousands of individuals of different races show five shapes, each clearly different from the others. Commenting, however, Dr. Hrdlicka says:

"Pure race types are rare, and between two types are many intergradations, belonging clearly to neither one race nor the other. Some of the types are distinct at birth, but most not until near or within adulthood.

"The precise classification of race types is still far from complete. Making them precise is one of anthropology's major future tasks."

Treasury Workers Fight Dismissals

Following Saturday's alleged dismissal of 206 architects and engineers by the procurement division of the Treasury Department, the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians today will demand an interview and explanation.

Statements of federation complain that the employes "were treated to the rude shock of newspaper and radio accounts of their own dismissals without any previous notification."

The organization also contends the dismissals were caused "not by lack of funds but merely by reduced Federal building activity.

104 German Children Are Cleveland Guests

Cleveland, May 2 (AP).—School children of Berlin and Cleveland met in Cleveland Public Auditorium tonight as several thousand persons greeted 104 German visitors who will live here for the next six months, attending school and seeing life as Clevelanders. The German visitors arrived from Buffalo in three buses.

They are to stay with the Cleveland children during the next six months, and the Clevelanders are to return the school exchange visit in Berlin next winter. The visiting delegation of boys and girls range in age from 12 to 18. The exchange was arranged between school authorities of Berlin and Cleveland.

Church Federation Opens War To Ban Burlesques in Capital

teasing consumed only a few minutes of the total time. Coming every 20 minutes or so, the disrobing numbers served to highlight a bill of dancing, singing and dialogue. Without the strip acts, most of the numbers would fit into any vaudeville show.

Applause Greets Performer.

In the first one, the lavender spotlight fell on the center of the stage, and through the parted curtain stepped a blonde to receive the first noticeable applause of the afternoon. The patrons seemed to recognize her as a strip-teaser, but at first glance she was more impressive than any of the previous performers only because she was more and better dressed. She wore a sparkling black and gray evening gown with a long train. Around her neck was a long, narrow collar-scarf that covered the woman's shoulders.

Walking quietly and quickly to the footlights, she began to sing—something about "Let Me Take You in My Arms." That went on for one verse and a chorus.

Then the orchestra picked up the tune in lilting fox-trot tempo, and the young woman began to walk back and forth across the stage.

This was the beginning of the tease—but the stripping did not begin for some minutes. The actress just walked back and forth. It was in the nature of a prance, such as a disturbed leopard sets up at the zoo. Only the woman smiled.

Reveals Shoulder.

She made several trips across the stage just smiling. Occasionally she tossed the scarf back over one shoulder. The lights were bright at this point.

The first sign of stripping came when she drew off one of her fluffy gloves. She tossed it behind the scenes as she turned to begin a new trip. Reaching the other side she discarded the other glove.

Apparently getting into the swing of her act, she negotiated the next round trip with a slight swaying of the hips. At the turn the right hand went up to unfasten the scarf. It came off, and teasingly she toyed with it as she continued her journey.

Then she unsnapped the bodice at the back, and the gown was revealed for the first time as a two-piece garment. The skirt clung intact. Spinning around, the stripper faced her audience squarely, and the patrons were surprised to note she still was keeping company with a slight, but efficient brassiere. The lights were very blue.

Smiles Coyishly.

A split second later the teaser was smiling coyishly and made a timely duck behind the scenery.

Strip-tease patrons know that is not the limax of the act, and what they applaud for is not an encore. After brief applause the entertainer stepped into the light once more, burdened only by her snugly fitting skirt, and the bit of raiment she kept working around in her hands. She maneuvered through a trip or two and then, at a turn, the left hand shifted to the waistline and pulled a snap-open.

The skirt began to fall, but the teaser caught it. Then as she appeared to be losing her grip, the lights became bluer than ever, and in its mystic hue she slipped out of view.

In New York, it is reported, there is still more to a strip-tease act than this—if the audience applauds hard enough. But there were no further developments yesterday, and, while the audience showed its appreciation, the lights came on and the chorus girls started their routine in the next number.

The strip-teaser did not even take a bow.

Brunette Appears Next.

There was more dancing and singing, more comedy and wisecracking. Eventually another well-dressed young women appeared, began to sing and started to walk and smile. The strip-teasing began all over again. Only this time it was a brunette, who wore blue and toyed with a shawl of ostrich plumes.

All shows are censored here, and have been for some time. Whether it has been adequate is something Maj. Brown will have to decide.

LaRoe and his associates will submit it is not enough. What his committee wants eliminated from the Capital's entertainment bill, he said, could not be announced until Maj. Brown gets its protest.

As for co-operation from other agencies, that may be developing, too. Spokesmen for the Washington Sodality Union, which acts here for the Catholic Legion of Decency, said they are "interested."

Oppose Immoral Shows.

"We're against immoral shows of all kinds," declared Miss Alma Ecthermann, chairman of the union's moral welfare committee.

Miss Ecthermann promised an investigation in the near future with a view to action.

But Miss Mary Mattingly, president of the Sodality Union, pointed out that the union could not take an official stand without the consent, or order, of Archbishop Michael Curley, of Baltimore.

In New York Patrick Cardinal Hayes described burlesque shows as "disgraceful and pernicious." Learning of the action of License Commissioner Paul Moss, advising police to halt the sale of tickets in certain houses, the cardinal said, "I praise God that our city officials and especially the commissioner of licenses have had the courage to stem the tide of filth that is engulfing us."

Broadway Ready for Fight.

New York, May 2 (AP).—Broadway was without burlesque for the first time in years tonight, while theater operators prepared to open a court battle tomorrow to regain the licenses they lost because "strip-teasers" teased too much.

Bewildered by the sudden, drastic action which closed their shows, upward of 700 "strippers," chorus girls, comics, stage hands and other employes of the city's 14 burlesque houses set out in search of new jobs pending the outcome of the threatened legal struggle.

Those slain were:

Mrs. Katherine Davis, 20, wife of Davis.

Willie Curtis, 55, and Mrs. Ollie Curtis, 50, parents of Mrs. Davis.

Sadie Curtis, 11-year-old daughter of Mrs. Curtis, was wounded in the shoulder as she fled toward woods of the Squaw Valley Indian settlement, where the victims lived and the shooting occurred.

Deputy Sheriff John Ford said he had been unable to determine a motive.

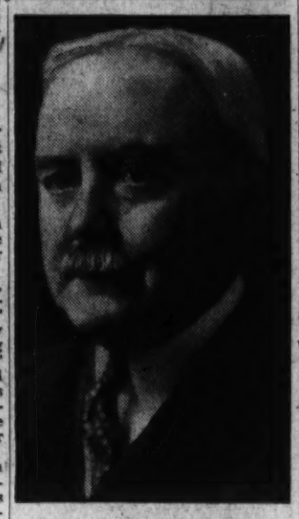
He said his investigation showed Davis called his wife from her parents' home and killed her. He shot Mrs. Curtis as she rushed to her daughter's side, and then killed Curtis.

Ford said a sister-in-law, Mabel Curtis, 17, hid under her bed when she heard the shots and screaming.

Unable to find the girl, Davis shot himself through the head, Ford declared.

Rowland Mahany, Statesman, Diplomat and Poet, Dies at 73

Brilliant Career Covered Many Fields; Served in Congress Twice.



ROWLAND B. MAHANY.

Rowland B. Mahany, 73, statesman, diplomat, and one of the last of Washington's "elegants," died yesterday morning at 1414 Madison street northwest.

A familiar figure in Washington since the 90s, when he came here from Buffalo, Mahany was noted for his dapper appearance.

A poet and editor of distinction, in addition to his other accomplishments, he was a crony of "Marse" Henry Watterson, Alfred Henry Lewis, and other celebrities along Washington's old "newspaper row."

Two weeks ago he left his stickbed and went to the National Press Club, there to mingle with 80-year-old Charley Hamilton, dean of the newspaper corps here, and other members of the Old-Timers' Club.

Mr. Mahany served two terms in Congress as a Republican from Buffalo, from 1895 to 1899. Prior to this he had been in the diplomatic service. First President Benjamin Harrison appointed him as secretary of the American Legation in Chile in 1890, and then Minister to Ecuador in 1892. In this post he concluded the Santos Treaty, negotiations for which had remained unsettled for ten years.

After his retirement from Congress, Mr. Mahany served in a number of private and public posts in this country and abroad. Admitted to the bar after returning to Buffalo, he became general counsel of the Polish Patriotic Congress in 1903. In 1910, he went into the newspaper business, becoming editor of the Buffalo Enquirer.

From 1914 to 1918 he was United States commissioner of conciliation. In the following year he was an assistant to the Secretary of Labor and Foreign Trade Relations Commissioner of the State Department.

Thereafter President Wilson appointed him as one of ten Federal umpires for the National War Labor Board. He also was made a director of the United States Housing Corporation.

In 1920-1921 he was solicitor of the Labor Department and for a time Acting Secretary of that department. In 1921 he also was the American representative at the meeting of the International Commission on Emigratio in Geneva, Switzerland.

Returning to practice law in this city, Mr. Mahany was counsel for the Japanese government in important war claims cases. Meanwhile he had changed his politics. He was a delegate to the Democratic national conventions of 1824 and 1928.

He was born in Buffalo September 28, 1864, the son of Kean and Catherine (Reynolds) Mahany. He attended Hobart College, Union College and Harvard College. He was a Phi Beta Kappa at Harvard and was graduated in 1888, summa cum laude.

In 1909 he published "Tuscany and Other Poems." Most of his writing in recent years was in the form of "Letters to the Editor," and those that came to The Post were welcomed for their beautiful rhetoric.

fighting in the Bermeo sector, on the Bay of Biscay coast northeast of the Basque capital, constituted "another stinging Italian defeat."

A Bilbao communique said two Italian divisions were routed by a Basque counter attack and abandoned large qunatities of war supplies. On the battlefield 197 Italian dead wearing Italian uniforms were picked up, it was stated. Documents found on Italian prisoners, said the communique, revealed there were 16,000 Italians on the Bilbao front, commanded by a Gen. Piasone.

The prisoners told of the landing of 2,000 Germans at San Sebastian April 26, the communique continued. German headquarters were established at Vitoria and Italian headquarters at Azpeitia, southwest of San Sebastian.

On Adolf Hitler's birthday, April 20, German pilots and artillerymen, already with the northern insurgent forces, paraded before their staff officers.

According to prisoners' stories, there were 70 or 80 German and Italian airplanes based at Vitoria and 30 or 40 more at Recajo.

The communique said armed trawlers greatly assisted the Basques in the Bermeo fighting, firing effectively from off the coast on Gen. Mola's lines.

The Basques said they had intercepted a radio message from the insurgents at the front to headquarters at Vitoria demanding immediate reinforcements and declaring they suffered 2,500 casualties in Saturday's fighting.

The insurgents declared the Bermeo fighting resulted in their capture of that important port and three other towns. Gen. Mola was pushing ahead in a series of swift attacks at different points in the Basque lines, said reports to Vitoria.

The communique announcing the loss of the Espana listed successes during the civil war by the insurgent naval forces. These included sinking of the government warship Fernandez, sinking of eight government coast guard boats and several armed freighters; capture of more than 50 freighters whose cargoes included 50 airplanes and many airplane motors, more than 100 guns, 3,000 machine guns, more than 100,000 rifles and 70,000,000 rifle cartridges, 20,000 artillery shells, 19,000 aviation bombs, 40,000 uniforms.

Promenaders Shelled.

Madrid, May 2 (AP).—Insurgent artillery sent shells screaming into holiday promenaders in Madrid today on Spain's "Fourth of July." A score were killed or wounded as they strolled in the warm sunshine.

20 Hurt in Crash In Boston Subway

Boston, May 2 (AP).—Two heavily loaded street cars crashed in a rear-end collision late tonight in the subway, causing a panic and injury to 20 persons.

Four of the injured were believed in serious condition.

The Boston Elevated reported that one car had stopped when the trolley pole came off, while the car was proceeding between the Park street and Scollay Square stations. The second car, the company said, struck the darkened car.

Emergency crews were rushed to the scene, as were ambulances from all intown police stations.

With the impact, passengers in both cars sought quick egress and, in the confusion that followed, many reported they were tramped on. Numerous passengers were treated for lacerated hands.

'Hail to the Chief' Called Ludicrous

Atlanta, May 2 (AP).—H. A. Taylor, band concerts director for the local observance of National Music Week, declared today the words to "Hail to the Chief"—the band march played for the President—are "ludicrous."

"They refer," he said, "not to a man, but to a pine tree."

And, he complained further, they were written by an Englishman—Sir Walter Scott.

Taylor, who is orchestra director for Tech High School here, says he has remedied the situation in new words and music of his own.

He titled it "Hail to Our Chief Executive," said he has mailed a copy to a radio network program, and will offer it to the Government "free of charge."

Detectives Locate Missing Paintings

Philadelphia, May 2 (AP).—Fourteen pictures missing from the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts were recovered by detectives in Harrisburg, Lieut. John J. Hanlon announced today.

He said Joseph Cassidy, former watchman at the academy, gave the information that led officers to the pictures.

Cassidy was arrested yesterday after paintings and statuary stored in a fireproof room of the academy were discovered to have been slashed and defaced. He had been discharged by the academy.

Harry Page, Harrisburg detective, said the pictures were found in several fashionable homes. They were brought back here.

Famous Silver Mine Will Be Worked Again

Denver, May 2 (AP).—The quest for silver ore in the famous Matchless mine which made the late H. A. W. Taber a multimillionaire will be renewed.

John L. Dower, of Denver, president of Shorego Mining Co., said tonight the Leadville mine had been leased to Thomas Palmer, of Grand Junction, Colo. He added Palmer "is confident there is a lot of ore in the mine."

On his deathbed after declining silver prices had eaten up his fortune, Tabor admonished his wife, Baby Doe:

"Hold onto the Matchless."

She did. With a shotgun, she guarded against possible poachers until she died in poverty two years ago.

Jurors to Hear Story Today of Cullinan's Love

Detroit Girl Will Take Stand in $100,000 Suit of Local Woman.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, May 2. — Miss Laura Strittmatter, member of a once wealthy Detroit family, will take the stand tomorrow in the $100,000 alienation of affection case filed against her by Mrs. Hallie Cullinan, of Washington, D. C.

She is expected to relate under direct examination the story of how she was wooed and married by Charles Cullinan under the impression he was divorced from the plaintiff.

The record of the trial covers a rapid succession of events in Washington, Detroit, Maryland, and an island in the St. Clair River, Mich., involving Cullinan and the two women upon whom he bestowed his attentions.

Mrs. Cullinan has told of kissing her husband good-by one morning in 1935 in Washington as he left to marry Miss Strittmatter and of his borrowing her automobile to take the new bride on a Maryland honeymoon. (The Cullinan-Strittmatter marriage was annulled in 1936).

The defense has presented testimony that Miss Strittmatter believed Cullinan was legally eligible for marriage, that she loved and trusted him and that she was the victim of his duplicity rather than the instigator of it.

Mrs. Cullinan has testified she was informed by her husband that he was being kept away from her by design on the part of persons aware she was his lawful wife. She told also of Cullinan's trips to hospitals to recuperate during stages of his complicated romances, indicating to her that his health and judgment was impaired.

Mrs. Cullinan read excerpts from letters written to her by Cullinan while allegedly a "prisoner" on Russell Island in the St. Clair River where Miss Strittmatter had a residence. It was from this spot Cullinan wrote for money to get back to his wife in Washington.

One letter to Mrs. Cullinan said:

"My Dear Sweet Girl:

"I have had two teeth pulled and, honey, my head feels better. Do you know, honey, it is awfully hard for me to remember things that have happened. It seems now that being on this island is a dream or nightmare. * * * I guess I was losing my mind because of my teeth."

The plaintiff and defense both maintain ignorance of Cullinan's present whereabouts. He was employed by the Home Owners Loan Corporation at the time of the Strittmatter marriage.

Cough Drop Employe Accused of Blackmail have accommodations befitting their rank.

Buckingham Palace will house many of them. Queen Maud of Norway, the King's aunt, was the first to arrive. Among the others to be guests of King George and Queen Elizabeth will be Crown Prince Olaf and Crown Princess Martha of Norway; Princess Juliana and Prince Bernhardt of the Netherlands; Prince Charles, Count of Flanders, brother of the King of the Belgians; Prince Paul of Greece, and 16-year-old Crown Prince Mihai of Rumania.

Prince Regent Paul and Princess Olga of Yugoslavia will stay with the princess' sister, the Duchess of Kent, in Belgrave Square. Crown Prince Frederick and Crown Princess Ingrid of Denemark will be guests of the princess' grandfather, the Duke of Connaught.

An army of 35,000 men, representing every race, color and creed within the British Empire, will participate in the coronation spectacle.

Some 25,000 of these soldiers will line the streets through which the colorful procession will pass in a remarkable assembly of empire military strength. Every regular, militia, volunteer, territorial and reserve unit will be represented. India is sending a complete regiment created from detachments from every military and semi-military group in the country.

Princess Elizabeth — "just past 11"—is going to wear a coronet and be attended by a lady-in-waiting for the first time in her life on coronation day.

She is looking forward to it as the greatest day she has ever known. The blonde little heiress-presumptive to the throne will take no active part in the Westminster Abbey ceremonies.

She is to have a new dress and robes, however, and will walk in the Abbey procession of princes and princesses of the blood royal. When the diamond-studded crown is placed on her mother's head, Princess Elizabeth will put on her new coronet "just like the peeresses" will be doing at the same moment.

The coronets for Elizabeth and her sister, 6-year-old Princess Margaret Rose, have been made by the crown jeweler who made their mother's new crown.

Steel Independents Face Strike Threat

Pittsburgh, May 2 (AP).—Independent steel producers who have failed to sign collective bargaining agreements with the Steel Workers Organizing Committee were faced tonight with the threat of strikes.

Committee Chairman Philip Murray said in a statement that "to those independent steel producers, some of whom have not negotiated, I say that they are going to do business with the Steel Workers Organizing Committee whether they like it or not."

The committee is a cornerstone of John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial organization.

Murray added:

"We don't like strikes, in fact our policy is against them. But we say this— that while we are not courting a fight, that if some independent steel companies want to take us on, we're not going to run away. If they want war, then war it must be."

Versailles Revision Urged as Peace Aid

New York, May 2 (AP).—A revision of the Treaty of Versailles as a means of eliminating deep-seated convictions which may lead to war was suggested today by Sir Herbert Samuel, British Liberal leader, in the current issue of International Conciliation, published by the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.

Monopoly Called Recovery Threat

By the Associated Press.

Senator Arthur Capper said yesterday the "big threat" to a recovery which will include equality of economic opportunity for the average citizen is "monopoly and monopolistic control of prices."

Capper said in a weekly address broadcast in Kansas that it is "beyond human nature to expect a monopoly to reduce prices in the same degree that it is able to reduce production costs."

"It is charged," he said, "that the Aluminum Company of America has accomplished 'oppressive and unreasonable price fixing' in raising prices despite the fact that its earnings doubled from 1935 to 1936.

"The Government's suit against the American Aluminum Company, long delayed, may mean that the Government is going to make a real attempt to halt the threatened runaway splurge of too high prices.

"Economists have been pointing out for months the danger of an inflationary movement that would be certain to culminate in another boom and the inevitable collapse that follows."

Capper said Government should aid agriculture and attempt to insure farmers a "fair share of the national income," for the benefit of the public. It is equally important, he said, to insure labor the right to collective bargaining and wages that will provide a comfortable living.

of 16,000 motion picture workers. As the parent organization of the crafts, it has sponsored the strike, called to enforce demands for union recognition, but has banked heavily on the support of the Screen Actors Guild, which represents 5,600 members, including nearly all the top flight players and stars.

Sunday is a slack day at the studios. There was only one company working at Paramount Studios, where Frances Dee and George Raft were on call for "Souls at Sea." Gary Cooper, starred in the picture, was not present, but studio officials said he was not on call.

Won't Curtail Work.

Pat Casey, labor conciliator for the producers, said none of the studios plans to curtail work schedules because of strike conditions. He reiterated his belief that a "reasonable and sensible solution" of difficulties could be reached. He said no questions relating to wages and hours had been submitted to him.

Casey said only 1,500 of the movies' 40,000 workers are involved in the controversy.

Robert Montgomery, president of the Screen Actors' Guild, was to preside at tonight's strike vote session. Other prominent players who were to take an active part in the session included Franchot Tone, Chester Morris, Frank Morgan, Francis Lederer, Joan Crawford, Frederic March and James Gagney.

Court Change Branded Last Step to Despotism

Boston, May 2 (AP).—United States Representative William Lemke, of North Dakota, defeated Union Party candidate for President last fall, tonight said President Roosevelt's proposal to reorganize the Supreme Court would remove "the last obstacle between democracy and despotism."

Addressing a meeting sponsored by the Central Council of Social Justice Clubs, Lemke declared the executive branch of the Government "has already devoured and partly digested the legislative branch and now seeks to devour the judicial branch."

'Chute Pupils Win Right to Bail Out— Just One at Time

Cincinnati, May 2 (AP).—A group of youthful graduates of a parachute jumping school won a day-long argument with law enforcement agencies late today and were permitted to go through with their commencement leaping ceremony—but not as they had planned.

Police, who had stubbornly resisted the announced plan of the group to stage a mass jumping demonstration, relented after hours of argument, but only to the extent of allowing the youthful party to make their jumps one at a time.

County Police Capt. Charles B. Coddington said: "They have the permission of the Department of Commerce, and the signed consent of their parents and guardians. There is nothing we can do."

By the time the argument was ended it was nearly dark, and only four members of the group had time to jump from planes over Mount Healthy Airport.

14 Are Rescued As Blast Sinks $50,000 Yacht

By the Associated Press.

Clarksville, Mo., May 2.—Fourteen persons aboard the Inland Waterways Corporation yacht President reached shore in lifeboats following an explosion which destroyed the $50,000 boat here this afternoon.

The only person injured was a member of the crew who suffered burns on his arms.

The explosion, Maj. Gen. Thomas Q. Ashburn, of Washington D. C., president of Inland Waterways Corporation, who was aboard, was quoted as saying, followed a fire which started from a stove in the kitchen. The fire spread rapidly to other sections of the craft. Maj. Ashburn said the boat was carrying 1,500 gallons of fuel oil.

J. L. Barron, of Clarksville, who was the first to reach the party after they came ashore, said Maj. Ashburn told him the yacht was "completely destroyed."

The explosion occurred on the Mississippi River about 3 miles south of here.

Others aboard included Gale F. Johnson, of St. Louis, division manager of the Metropolitan Insurance Co. Names of other passengers were not available.

Maj. Ashburn said the party was en route to St. Paul, Minn., to attend a directors' meeting. They left St. Louis Saturday afternoon.

The President was a palatial craft used by the Waterways Line as an official inspection boat.

the belligerents except under such regulations as may be prescribed by the President. (The State Department now is working on regulations to be issued in the near future).

The embassy said the loyalist government at Valencia "is ready to give all kinds of facilities" to an investigation of the destruction of Basque cities with "unequaled savagery" and "barbarous feats."

The embassy's communication from the Basque government claimed 16,000 Italian troops were behind the advance guard in Guipuzcoa Province. The population of La Concha, San Sebastian, the statement said, was driven into underground passages by "airplane-raid alarms" to conceal the arrival of 1,500 German troops. German pilots paraded in military fashion on Hitler's birthday, the communication asserted.

The Basque government said information it had gathered confirmed "previous denunciations about the active and decided German and Italian participation in this rebellion against the republic."

Wire Rate Cuts, Service Shifts To Start June 1

Agreement With FCC to Slash 3 Million Yearly From Nation's Bill.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 2.—Rate slashes and service alterations in overnight domestic communication, to become effective June 1, were announced today by both telegraph and radiotelegraph companies.

The new tariffs, agreed upon in conferences with the Federal Communications Commission, were disclosed simultaneously by Western Union and Postal Telegraph companies and by Radio Corporation of America and Mackay Radio & Telegraph Co.

Telegraph tariffs provide for discontinuance of the 10-word night message and the 50-word night letter. They contemplate a 25-word minimum night letter as a rate base. The proposed night letter may be sent between the United States' two most separate points for 50 cents.

Words in excess of the minimum will be charged for in groups of five and according to the distance the original 25 words are sent. Charges for the excess wordage will decrease progressively as their number increases, and over the shorter distances, it will be possible to add to the minimum for a fifth of a cent a word.

"The immediate effect of the new rates will be a saving of approximately $3,000,000 in the telegraph bill of the Nation," said R. B. White, Western Union president.

"They will open to the public what amounts to a new use of the service by making it possible to write letters by telegraph at a reasonable cost," said Clarence H. Mackay, Postal's board chairman.

In Radiotelegraphy, Radio Corporation of America and Mackay Radio & Telegraph Co. announced similar changes. Both will discontinue the 15-word night message and 60-word night letter and establish a new rate on a 30-word minimum.

The 30-word night letter, like the 25-word telegraph night letter, may be sent anywhere in the United States for 50 cents. Additional words over the minimum of 30 will be charged for in groups of six. Distance and volume will prorate the excess charge.

Father Duffy Statue Dedicated in New York

New York, May 2 (AP).—A statue of Father Francis P. Duffy, chaplain of the "Fighting Irish" Sixty-ninth Regiment through the Spanish-American and World Wars, was dedicated today in Times Square before thousands of soldiers and civilians.

A parade of the 165th Regiment, present designation of the old Sixty-ninth, and veterans' and Catholic units preceded the unveiling. Postmaster General Farley, former Gov. Alfred E. Smith and James J. Tunney, former heavyweight champion, were among those taking parts in honoring the wearer of the Distinguished Service Cross and the Croix de Guerre, who died in 1932 of complications of overseas rigors.

Newark, N. J., May 2 (U.P.).—Maj. Anthony W. Greely, of Washington, looked on today while his sister smashed a bottle of champagne over the bow of the General Adolphus W. Greely, a three-masted schooner which will sail June 27 on an Arctic expedition.

Mrs. Gertrude Greely Shedd, of North Conway, N. H., daughter of Gen. Greely, who in 1882 led the first international polar year expedition, christened the ship in honor of her father. Upwards of 500 persons attended the ceremonies.

Studio Picketing Halted for Parley

Hollywood, Calif., May 2 (AP).—Picketing of all major studios ceased today as 40 representatives of the Federated Motion Picture crafts gathered in closed meeting to discuss strike strategy.

With four unions having a membership of 2,500 already on strike, members of 14 others held separate meetings to decide whether they are to join a walkout tomorrow that may affect 10,000 craftsmen and players and cripple the motion picture industry.

The crux of the threatening situation comes late tonight as the powerful Screen Actors' Guild votes at a mass meeting in the Hollywood Legion Stadium on a proposal to call a strike. The Screen Actors' Guild represents 5,600 members, including nearly all the top-flight players and stars.

Hebrew Award Made To Mayor LaGuardia

New York, May 2 (U.P.).—Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia, who brought about an exchange of notes between Berlin and Washington because of his criticism of Chancellor Hitler, tonight was awarded the American Hebrew Medal for the Promotion of Better Understanding between Christian and Jew.

Moscow Crowds Fill Churches At Easter Rites

100,000 to 200,000 Take Part in Greek Orthodox Ceremonies.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, May 2.—Large numbers of Moscow citizens who cling to the old faith of Russia today attended Easter services of the Greek Orthodox Church.

It was estimated between 100,000 and 200,000 took part in the services in about 25 Moscow churches which began late Saturday and continued throughout the night and morning.

The city's principal church, the Dorogomilovsky Sobor Cathedral, was jammed for all its services. The Orthodox Metropolite, or Archbishop Sergei, presided there.

In villages around Moscow the churches were also packed. Thousands of late-comers could not get more than a glimpse of the churches' interiors.

About half the Moscow churches observing Easter belong to the Obnovlentsky, or Renovated Church, which true orthodox believers do not recognize.

For the great non-religious masses as well as for the devout it was a holiday, having been set aside as a day of rest for workers who participated in yesterday's great May Day demonstrations.

Since publication of the new Russian constitution, with its guarantees of religious liberty, there have been evidences of religious revival. It was estimated only 75,000 attended Easter services in Moscow last year.

The revival, although slow, has been sufficient to cause militant atheists among the Bolshevists to express alarm and call for renewal of their campaigns against religion. The official press has published many statements of atheist leaders lamenting the setback to their cause.

Some have expressed fear that the church, adapting itself to Soviet life and changing Soviet conditions, will even put forward candidates in the impending elections for village, community and provincial Soviets.

About 50 per cent of Russia is still religious, according to admissions of atheist leaders, and in many outlying communities the church is coming back vigorously through use of methods of organization and propaganda learned from the Communist Party.

Arlington Set To Lay Stone At Postoffice

Farley, Other Notables to Attend Ceremony Wednesday.

Civic Parade, Luncheon Among Highlights of Program.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST, Clarendon, Va., Tel. Clar. 809.

With flags flying from business houses, Arlington County is preparing for a big day in its history Wednesday—the laying of the corner stone for the Arlington Postoffice Building, the first Federal structure to be erected in the county.

Postmaster General Farley will be honor guest and principal speaker. Among other guests will be Representative Howard W. Smith and Fourth Assistant Postmaster General Smith W. Purdum.

The corner stone will be laid by Philip O. Shepherd, master of Columbia Lodge, No. 285, A. F. and A. M. He will use the trowel and gavel used by George Washington in laying the corner stone of the Capitol. The exercises are scheduled to start at 2:30 o'clock.

Nation-wide Broadcast.

William E. A. McShea, chairman of the county board and general chairman of the committee on arrangements, announced a change in the time for the program to allow for a Nation-wide broadcast.

The luncheon at the Army-Navy Country Club will be at noon, instead of 1 p. m., as previously announced.

The parade, led by a police escort, followed by the marshal's car and the Washington-Lee High School Band, will move from courthouse at 1:30 p. m.. In the line of march will be the 6,500 school children, followed by floats of the schools and the American Legion Drum Corps of Arlington County, and Hyattsville (Md.) Boy and Girl Scouts, the Kiwanis Club Band, service clubs, Business and Professional Woman's Club, Arlington County Nurses Association float, Arlington County Bar Association, civic organizations, trade associations, business firms' floats and the county fire departments.

Judges of Floats.

Judges for the floats will be H. W. Hendley, Howard R. Bloomer, jr., John F. Webster and Miss Josephine Sterling.

Following the exercises, Arlington Post, No. 139, American Legion, has planed an old-fashioned barbecue and an evening of entertainment on its ground, located on North Washington boulevard at Clarendon.

Thousands of persons who will attend the corner stone laying have been requested not to attempt to drive automobiles in the vicinity of the exercises. The legion has arranged for free transportation to its grounds by buses from Clarendon.

The semiannual inspection of motor vehicles, which started Saturday, will continue until May 31.

The inspection consists of a complete check on lights, brakes, steering gear, rear view mirror and windshield wiper.

Car Inspectors.

The State motor vehicle commissioner announced the following automobile dealers in the county as official inspectors:

Rosslyn—Windridge & Handy. The Arlington Motor Co. Fort Myer Heights—Olmsted Motor Co. Clarendon—Kennedy Service Co., Earl Kirby Motor Co., Al Masters Service Co. Ballston — Howell Motor Co. Cherrydale — Cherrydale Garage, Greenwood Garage, Toone Service Co. Arlington—Alcova Motor Co., and Tucks Service Co.

The Catholic Woman's Club of Arlington County will serve its annual dinner tomorrow evening from 5 to 7 o'clock at the church, the president, Mrs. Helen S. Cyr, announced. Mrs. J. B. McCausland is general chairman.

The ladies auxiliary of the Arlington Hospital Association will hold its May meeting tomorrow at 1:30 o'clock at the Ashton Heights Woman's clubhouse on North Irving street.

Legislators Dispute Levy in Maryland

Annapolis, May 2 (AP).—Speaker Emmanuel Gorfine and Delegate Kent R. Mullikin joined today in asserting the House had approved a 1 per cent personal income tax in theory only.

Both the Speaker and the ways and means committee chairman pointed out the House had not committed itself to any particular bill, although it favored an income tax as a means of raising revenue for relief needs.

Their statements followed Attorney General Herbert R. O'Conor's assertion that the 1 per cent income tax suggested by Delegate James M. Broumel (Democrat), Harford, was possibly dangerous.

O'Conor said yesterday he believed the Broumel measure was discriminatory and would have to undergo court tests as to its validity if passed by the Legislature.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Woodstock, Va., May 2.—A crowd estimated at 1,500 gathered at Endless Vaverns today to greet Miss Gretchen Thompson, Queen Shenandoah XIV, as she received her first official welcome to Shenandoah Valley in a pre-festival ceremony. The large crowd warmly welcomed Her Majesty, a radiant beauty, as she stepped from her royal car, which was escorted by a detachment of Virginia State police.

Frank Whissler, the Mountain King, extended to Miss Thompson the official welcome to the Old Dominion in a colorful ceremony, held deep in the caverns and far beneath the Massanutten Mountain.

Queen Shenandoah XIV was presented with a beautiful bracelet, symbolic of a pledge from the Mountain King and his subjects to grant her every wish during her reign over the Apple Blossom Festival, which started today.

"I have never been so happy in all my life, and I am simply overcome," Miss Thompson declared.

Accompanying the Queen were Mrs. B. B. Dutton, director of the social activities during the festival, which begins at Winchester on Friday; Fred A. Read, jr., director general of the festival, and Harry Flood Byrd, jr., assistant director general.

A reception was given in honor of the Queen and her escorts, after the ceremonies, by Maj. and Mrs. E. M. Brown. The party returned to Winchester, following the gala event.

Hitler's War On Religion.

In his May Day speech, Adolf Hitler did not openly state an intention to wipe out traditional Christianity in the Third Reich. Indeed, he specifically declared that as long as the churches "confine their activities to religious problems the state would not molest them." Yet the dominant note he struck in dealing with the church question was one of obvious hostility to church organizations, leaders and communicants, whether Catholic or Protestant, that have insisted on clinging to their old precepts and practices.

Not only did the Fuehrer give his tacit approval to the National Church movement, which seeks to do away with both Protestantism and Catholicism, but he also warned the churches to keep their hands off youth. The molding of the young, he declared, is the sole prerogative of the state.

Apparently the Christian churches in Germany can have peace, provided they abandon the essence of what they have hitherto stood for. Sacrifice of aims and principles is to be the price paid for tolerance.

This price, be it said to their eternal credit, the outstanding spokesmen of Catholicism and Protestantism in Germany have refused to pay. With remarkable courage they have fought the fight for religious freedom. Alone among the various elements in the Third Reich have they refused to become co-ordinated.

Hitherto the war against them has been waged by indirection. In the case of the Catholic Church, for instance, it has been a devious war of attrition, with little more than lip service rendered to the Concordat of 1933 regulating the relations between that church and the German state.

Now the fight may come out into the open. And in that fight the methods employed by the Nazis may be on the same uncivilized level as those employed in the recent bombardment of Guernica. That this is not a mere hypothetical possibility can be seen in the new wave of trials which has broken out in the Reich, involving charges of immorality and currency smuggling against Catholic lay brothers and clergymen. While professing to be tolerant of religion, the Nazi state does not hesitate to employ any means, however crude, to bend the churches to its will.

"Must Not Be Countenanced."

Applause greeted the remark of Representative Dingell on the floor of the House that delay in providing Washington with a suitable airport "must not be countenanced much longer." In effect, that applause will be repeated throughout the city and in other metropolises connected with the Capital by air transport lines.

So much has been said about the distressing lack of airport facilities in Washington that the case has long since been proved. The fact that Mrs. Roosevelt had to go to Baltimore to take a plane to the Northwest pointedly illustrates the need which everyone recognizes. Congress has repeatedly agreed that something must be done. Yet no concrete decisions have been reached.

The only reason for turning this problem over to a special commission was to secure action where there had been only disagreement and muddling before. Congress wanted to undercut the rivalry of groups sponsoring different sites. It wanted to centralize responsibility for selection of an airport upon a relatively small group. But apparently the group chosen for that undertaking has fallen into the same difficulties that have denied Washington a suitable airport for ten years.

If action is to be taken at this session, the report of the commission will have to be filed in the very near future. Unfortunately, there are no prospects of such action. The commission appears to be bogged down by either conflict or indifference or both. The facts that its problem is very difficult and that a member of the commission is sick help to explain the delay, but they do not excuse it. The possibility that every new procrastination may result in a tragedy should be sufficient to stir this agency into action, in spite of handicaps.

Mr. Dingell's timely word of advice ought to bring quick response from the Airport Commission. If a report is no soon forthcoming, however, it will be the clear responsibility of Congress to reinstruct the commission or discharge it in favor of a more effective agency.

Not A Source Of Economy.

District residents may well be perturbed by reports that an economy cut will be applied to the $5,000,000 Federal "contribution" to Washington's municipal budget. That suggestion arises out of a complete misunderstanding of the Government's relations to the Capital City. It can not be accepted without inflicting a grave injustice upon the local community.

So far as Washington is concerned, the Federal Government occupies the position of a taxpayer. It obtains from the District fire and police protection, the benefits of an elaborate park system and specialized planning agencies, judicial service, education for the children of Federal employes temporarily located here and many other types of municipal service. Efficient performance of these functions is just as important to the National Government as it is to local residents.

When it comes to paying the bills, however, some legislators on Capitol Hill seem to have taken the attitude that the imperative need for Federal economy gives the Government an excuse to evade its responsibilities to Washington. If a large corporation here should fail to meet its obligations to the community, the District would take over enough of its property to satisfy tax claims, regardless of what the status of its finances might be. No such action can be taken against the Government, of course, but actually its obligation is the same as that of individuals who benefit from the maintenance of municipal services.

Congress began slashing its allowance for maintenance and development of the Capital in 1933. At that time there was some excuse for reduction of the "lump sum," for local expenditures were also reduced. But the Federal allowance was cut out of all proportion to the economies effected. From a total of $9,500,000 in 1932 it was trimmed to $5,000,000 for the current year. In the last four budgets, however, expenditures have been rising. Now the District is confronted by a deficit that may reach $8,000,000. To slash the Federal allowance again in face of these circumstances would be a clear injustice to local taxpayers who would have to supply the deficiency.

It may be assumed that Congress will examine the District budget with great care and eliminate every unnecessary expenditure. Indeed, the appropriation bill has already undergone three vigorous prunings. When the total has been decided upon no economy can be effected by reducing the amount which the Federal Government must pay and correspondingly increasing the obligation of District taxpayers. That would be merely a shift of national responsibility to local residents.

At best the $5,000,000 "lump sum" is a temporary compromise. It does not represent an equitable or scientific adjustment of fiscal relations between the two governments. If that inadequate allowance should be further reduced on the pretext of effecting economies, it would leave District finances in a still more confused predicament.

The Systematic Way.

Repenting of the lavish spending which has produced a chronically unbalanced budget, a large number of Congressmen are now demanding wholesale cuts in expenditures regardless of consequences.

This impulsive habit of rushing from one extreme to another is not conducive to true economy. Dollars are well saved when unnecessary or undesirable expenditures are eliminated. Dollars are not really saved if a refusal to spend impairs the efficient functioning of essential services. Indeed, the indirect losses traceable to an unrealistic economy program would in the long run cost us dearly.

Proposals to make uniform percentage cuts in appropriations are unintelligent in theory and may prove impracticable in application. As an alternative method Representative Woodrum proposes a revision of all appropriation bills, in committee, for the purpose of determining how much more can be saved without depriving essential services of necessary appropriations.

That is a systematic, discriminating method of procedure which ought to yield positive results. It is preferable to the percentage-cut method, not because it might save less money but because, if the technique is resolutely applied, it will save more.

Untimely Tinkering.

Representative Wood chose a most inopportune time to introduce his bill for the creation of a new board of public welfare. The organization and functioning of the existing board is being carefully studied by the citizens' committee appointed by the District Commissioners. It would be most unreasonable to make any important changes in the local government until the report of this group is available.

Aside from that fact, the bill has little to recommend it. It would substitute for the present Board of Public Welfare, serving without pay, three $8,000-per-year officials. That addition to the District's unbalanced budget, small though it is, would certainly not be welcome unless there is some good reason for making the change.

The purpose of the bill, Mr. Wood says, is to promote efficiency in handling welfare funds. He thinks the Administration of relief in the District is haphazard. But no proof of that assumption is forthcoming. And the current report of the board's public assistance division undermines Mr. Wood's charge that the cost of administering relief here is excessive.

Moreover, the President's committee on reorganization of the Federal Government recently took the position that three-man boards are less efficient than single directors functioning under the direction of advisory groups serving without salary. The Board of Public Welfare already fits the pattern outlined by the Brownlow committee. Is Mr. Wood prepared to show that progress lies in a direction diametrically opposite to that pointed out by the Brownlow report?

The District government is in need of extensive reorganization. But changes should be made only for very good reasons. Mere tinkering accentuates confusion and makes it the more difficult for governmental agencies to render the service expected.

Strikes In Great Britain.

After seven years of almost unbroken industrial peace, British labor is again showing signs of restiveness. The strike of the London bus drivers and the projected coal strike are storm signals that give warning of trouble ahead. To us these disturbances are most interesting as a footnote to the observations of those overoptimistic Americans who believe that all strikes and lockouts are due to failure to develop an effective unionism.

Great Britain has had a long and, on the whole, highly successful experience with collective bargaining. Employers not only recognize labor unions, but prefer to deal with them rather than with individuals. In many ways, moreover, the unions serve the government.

Nevertheless, there come times when the would-be parties to an agreement simply cannot come to terms. Collective bargaining machinery functions smoothly when industry is able and willing to meet the demands of labor for higher wages and shorter hours. It is also easy to manipulate when labor is making few demands, either because employes are satisfied or fearful of dismissal. Peaceful relations between employer and employe are subjected to a severe strain, however, whenever organized workers begin to make demands that the employer has reason to know he cannot afford.

The recent rise in living costs in Great Britain is regarded as one potent cause of the growing spirit of unrest in that country. Added to that, expanding industrial activity has increased employment and in some cases has resulted in actual shortages of skilled workers. Even the most perfect system of collective bargaining is likely to crack under the weight of such a combination of factors, giving labor both incentive and courage to press for concessions.

If strikes of major proportions occur in Great Britain, where years of experience with collective bargaining have disciplined tempers and tempered demands, they are certain to break out in communities with a less-developed technique of industrial relations. However, with collective bargaining firmly entrenched, we shall have a first line of defense against industrial anarchy and feudalism. And the oftener that line is successfully held against sporadic onslaughts, from both directions, the brighter becomes the outlook for industrial peace as a rule rather than an exception.

Storm Over Eden.

Writers on mythology have made it plain that the gods and goddesses who dwelt on high Olympus were all too human in their appetites, foibles and frailties. In this they closely resembled their modern successors of Hollywood.

But Zeus, Juno, Venus, Mars and the others of the Greco-Roman Pantheon had one advantage over the male and female divinities of the silver screen. They never had to make a decision as to what their conduct should be in the event of a labor disturbance. The dispensers of nectar and ambrosia never went on strike. But the painters, make-up artists, scenic artists and draftsmen of Hollywood have done just that, and are demanding that they be joined by all the others who are in receipt of pay checks from the producers, including the stars.

Just what the reply of the Greta Garboes and Marlene Dietrichs and Clark Gables of the film colony will be remains to be seen. But already the American people have received a shock from which they will not quickly recover. For in a world of make-believe a harsh note of reality has been struck. Those privileged to experience intimate contact with the dazzling figures of the screen—to paint their cheeks, to fix long lashes on their eyelids and otherwise heighten their glamour—are apparently not content with such soul-satisfying activities. They demand something more substantial from the producers as well. And, what is more, they are appealing to the stars to help them in their cause.

Is this Hollywood or Detroit? Aren't the movies one happy family as the screen magazines and innumerable screen columns, not to mention the interminable output of the press agents, would lead one to believe? Is it possible that they are just another part of the workaday world? Some have always suspected that Hollywood is only a tinsel Eden; but is is a shocking blow to discover that this is actually the case.

A bill has been introduced in Congress to permit the mailing of manuscripts as third-class matter. And even this classification would be highly flattering to a lot of them.

All communications must carry the writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the Editor's discretion. In fairness to other correspondents, brevity is requested. Letters are subject to condensation.

New York's 'Vigilantes.'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There appears to be a brighter outlook for the citizens of New York City in its formation of a band of "Vigilantes" to break down crime in that city. The harassed and bullied inhabitants should raise a banner of commendation to the uprising of civic-minded citizens who plan to attack and destroy the existence of the present criminal organization.

The attack will mean a battle royal against the power of the underworld, and its numerous subsidiaries. They will need to break into firmly entrenched armies of corrupt, petty politicians who form, in chain-like procession, a defense of graft from police upward. The confusion and ambiguity in criminal law and its administration of justice will prove a baffling problem. Will they examine the condition of supercrowded jails and penitentiaries which are turning this country into a Sodom and Gomorrah? Will they prove themselves to be the twentieth century deliverers? If so, let honor and praise be bestowed on those people of the Empire State and those of its chief city.

A quotation from Plato might not be out of place: "The responsibility is a social one * * * to arouse in all liberal minds a desire to work for better government, better education, a nobler kind of human existence."

ISABEL VICKERS.
Washington, April 30.

'Kultur For Spain.'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Not long ago I wrote you a letter about your attitude to Hitler. Today you bring Mr. Elderman's excellent cartoon, "In Hoc Signo," and your editorial, "Kultur For Spain," about the last events in Guernica, barbarously destroyed in blood and fire by Hitler's henchmen. Two years ago this man said that nothing is done in German life without his will. As lord of war and chief commander of the army he is responsible for the massacre of thousands of innocent women and children in Spain, together with the other madman of Europe, Mussolini. An equal pair of brethren.

AN OLD READER.
Silver Spring, Md., April 30.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your very fine editorial on the loyalist versus rebel question deserves the hearty applause of all American citizens.

As one who usually disagrees with your editorial policies, it is a real pleasure to have an opportunity to thank you for this genuine spark of liberalism as shown in "Kultur For Spain."

MARGUERITE EGLOFF.
Washington, April 30.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your editorial, "Kultur For Spain," you write that "the current display of barbarism has shocked a world whose sense of indignation has become dulled by recurrent atrocities.

What is the remedy? Ideology must be met with ideology and not mere criticism or disdain. If Frau Ludendorff's philosophy demands that Germans return to their Teutonic gods, and the idea is sufficiently powerful to gather millions of "Wotan"-loving Germans, what have you to meet it with? Can you formulate a philosophy, an ideology with equal virtue or magnetism to combat it? Here is where democracy, based on mere material prosperity, becomes top-heavy, and something else must be found to remedy the situation.

C. PHILIP.
Washington, April 30.

Political Realigment.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Do you not think it is high time to have a realignment of political parties in the United States? Many letters that smell of the eighteenth century come into your column signed "Democrat," and many others, expressing precisely the same ancient sentiments, arrive and are printed as letters from "Republican."

Up on Capitol Hill there are supposed to be two parties, representing something or other. But, can you read their speeches and tell (without looking at the names) whether a Republican or a Democrat is speaking? The Democrats run in my own State from Martin Dies to Maury Maverick. Both those men are elected by the "Democratic Party" of Texas, but no one, not even the two in question, would pretend that the men have anything else in common.

I honestly think that the people of my State and the people of the United States should have a liberal party and a conservative party to choose between. Until they do, nothing can really be accomplished. If the Democratic majority in Congress at this session had been the majority of a truly liberal party (as I think the voters intended it should be), they would have long ago "unpacked" that court and gone to work on flood relief, and other vital problems.

High Cost Of Living.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Two items that have come into prominence in the press during the past day or two I find are full of interest.

One citizen writes a letter which you published today that is full of meat. He points out that while his salary has been increased 4½ per cent, the cost of his living has gone up 10 per cent. This leaves him 5½ per cent in the hole. He feels that he has a grievance. Doubtless he has. Now, it occurs to me that, based on a purely mathematical basis, the man whose income has not increased at all, and whose living expenses have increased 10 per cent, has a still greater right to thrash out with his front and hind feet.

Now, there is to be a cut in the governmental expenditures. I hope in this act of economy the emergency Army officer will not be penalized by any heavier load than is anyone else. The retired emergency Army officer (retired on account of wounds received in actual combat) was cut in his retirement 15 per cent as was everyone on the Government's pay rolls. Following this, if he was living outside the continental limits of the United States of America, he had the balance cut 50 per cent! Now, there were only a very few of them living outside the continental limits of the United States. They were doing so because the retired pay made it possible for them to cover the living expenses by doing so, since there are still remaining a few places which have not been cursed by the high standard of living fetish.

A Memorial To Jefferson.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I cannot help voicing my ideas in this memorial controversy. If a memorial to Jefferson is needed, why ruin the already beautiful park and put up something only for artificial beauty? Why not build something really worth while and really needed? My idea may be wrong, but I do not think so. Here it is for what it is worth:

During the last flood in Rock Creek Park residents of the northern part of the city who desired to cross the park had to drive down to Calvert street and cross at that point. Why not erect a bridge across the park similar to the one on Connecticut avenue, having this bridge start at a point somewhere between the Sixteenth Street Reservoir and Walter Reed Hospital and connecting with some elevation on the west side of the park? I would even suggest that this bridge start in the vicinity of the reservoir as in this vicinity directly east of the reservoir is one of the most beautiful streets in the city, as far as simplicity is concerned, named Jefferson street.

Such a bridge would enable anyone desirous of reaching the vicinity north of the National Cathedral from the vicinity north of the Soldiers Home, and vice versa, to do so in case of floods, which frequently occur in the creek, without having to go so far out of their way. Then again, such a bridge would make it possible for the bus companies to have a regular bus route across the park at this point to accommodate the people who are rapidly filling these two parts of the city.

Again I say build a memorial, but let it be something useful as well as simply ornamental.

JOHN A. SMITH.
Washington, April 28.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A "site" for the Jefferson Memorial? No doubt visitors from all parts of the country to their Capital City have a deeper appreciation of that lovely fountain and plaza on Capitol Hill than have many residents, both permanent and temporary, of the City of Washington.

A fair price to the owners there, three or four months for the razing of certain buildings, and presto! the land is ready for the erection of a memorial with a statue of Jefferson facing the beautiful fountain, with intriguing pink dogwood trees nearby—and even more than this, facing the statue of the Great Emancipator.

M. U. E.
Towson, Md., April 30.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: To change the Tidal Basin, to say nothing of the beauty of the cherry blossoms, would certainly not be in keeping with the ideals of Thomas Jefferson, whose theme was that good work for the living today is better than funeral orations and monuments for the dead of yesterday.

WILLIAM H. TRANTHAM.
Washington, April 29.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This year the cherry blossom pilgrims to Washington looked sadly at the lovely sight . . . a rosy cloud along the water's edge and in its mirror . . . for the unique and beautiful planting is threatened by yet another memorial.

Residents of Washington are naturally unaware of the temples, statues and stones that honor the illustrious dead at every turn, but they impress (and depress) many visitors. Indeed, the mortuary contemplation suggests that most of the Government buildings need very little remodeling to become grandiose incineraria, or those repositories where the modernistic dead can lie on white shelves instead of graves. Even the museums are tombs, after a fashion.

It is in the nature of things that memorials should express their creators rather than the memorialees. Are the ghosts of Washington and Lincoln delighted with their monuments? Is the practical spirit that was Thomas Jefferson wholly charmed with the idea of a $3,000,000 building that shall be useless?

MARTIA LEONARD.
Mount Kisco, N. Y., April 25.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Please permit me to commend Representative Edward T. Taylor, of Colorado, who as chairman of the House Appropriations Committee refused to appropriate the necessary funds for the proposed Thomas Jefferson Memorial. This sane and commendable action will, no doubt, act like a soothing tonic to some of the gentlemen on the Hill, who have worked themselves into hysterics in this memorial business, mainly fostered, it is said, by the cement trust.

No injury, I am sure, is being done to the great Thomas Jefferson, who has rested peacefully all these years, and, I believe, if he looks down from his Elysian abode upon the children of men, will agree with the immortal Shakespeare, "What fools these mortals be," and would be the last person who would want taxpayers' money squandered to honor him with something just to look at, when millions of people are without work and food.

When this memorial building hysteria subsides, and common sense again sits in the judgment seat, I hope the Nation will honor the immortal Jefferson with really something practical and useful, like a great auditorium, so much needed here, including a National Guard armory. Let it be something which will honor the living as well as the dead.

Coronation Crazy

THE show is going to cost us £454,000, but, says the Sunday Chronicle, our visitors are expected to spend £6,000,000, including £2,000,000 on drinking the King's health on the great day. It is regarded as a dirty trick on the part of the French to open their exposition in Paris 11 days before our big show. Throughout Europe this summer, the watchword will be: "All that the traffic will bear."

It seems only yesterday that Sam Dodsworth was among us, wondering uneasily whether his hat, guaranteed by the Hub Hatters in Zenith to be the smartest in America, was quite the thing for Piccadilly.

Dodsworth need entertain no sartorial qualms even if he manages to crash the coronation itself; though this would be an unlikely feat, since the Abbey, with 18 inches of seat-space for each person, including the fattest duchess in all her war paint, holds only 7,500, at least two-thirds of whom will be behind pillars. If he turns up in a dress suit, he may be taken for nothing more outre than a Socialist M. P., the members of H. M. loyal Opposition having decided to shun knee breeches and similar gauds.

Nor will he have difficulty in making himself similarly comfortable at other functions of the social season, for if by chance he is invited to one of the royal garden parties, he can stroll on the Buckingham Palace lawn in a hired morning coat, striped trousers and topper, secure in the knowledge that some of his fellow-guests have obtained theirs on the same terms.

If Dodsworth finds himself among the peers and peeresses for whom luncheon will be served on coronation day in the Royal Gallery of the House of Lords at a flat rate of 10s. 6d. a head, let him not fear that his Western ways will make him conspicuous. At this set-out, the fiasco of one of the jubilee luncheons may well be repeated: on that occasion, the catering arrangements slipped up, and hungry guests, reduced almost to eating their medals, fought like dogs.

Having more than once seen the British nobility in the act of feeding, I have no hestitation in reassuring Dodsworth. At the Grand National recently, I saw the holder of one of our most revered titles with a pork pie in one hand and a bottle in the other, taking alternate bites and swigs.

If Dodsworth has not already made hotel reservations in London and has not planked down the money for a seat at a window (the average price is $25, and there is a proposal to charge entertainment tax as well), let me invite him to spend coronation week in some such spot as the ancient cathedral city that I inhabit.

The magistrates have been graciously disposed to grant us the boon of an extra hour for boozing, which means that the pubs will remain open until 11 p. m. "I don't think the privilege will be abused," said the chief constable, thereby confounding the disloyal devices of a couple of parsons and three lay preachers who had argued that such an extension of drinking hours would be the thin edge of a licentious wedge.

I hope that Dodsworth will not be seriously incommoded if one of our heat waves is in full blast. The first usually arrives in May, and the newspapers salute it in headlines: "70 in Shade. Britain Swelters. Thousands Prostrated." And there ought to be a guidebook for the visitor. It would warn him that if he uses a seat in a park, he must pay 2d. for it, and retain the ticket for inspection. It would tell him that the London tube trains stop running about midnight, and that the only means of waftage after that is the costly taxicab.

But nearly twice as many people are killed by motor cars daily in London as in New York. Still, Dodsworth, having missed the last tube train, can walk to his lodging with reasonable assurance that he will not be held up. But if he leaves his front door unlocked, as in Zenith, he will certainly lose his watch, and his pants with it.

(H. W. Seaman in the American Mercury.)

Kentucky Place Names.

In the proclamation by the President establishing the Cumberland National Forest in Kentucky the description of the boundaries of the forest brings in some fine, homespun place names. Among them are: Sugar Tree Hollow, Whetstone Creek, Roundstone Creek, Clover Bottom Road, Little and Big Doe Creeks, Hog Hollow, Piney Branch, Calaboose School, Hell Creek, Old Jack Branch Road, Warfork Creek, Rockcastle River, Sublimity Road, Scuffletown Road, Redbird Lane and Bon Jellico. It must also be recorded, with regret, that the name of Zag and Disputanta, two Kentucky towns, are also included in the description.

In a land of Sugar Tree Hollow and Hog Hollow, of Warfork Creek and Scuffletown Road, it is plain that nobody has been at pains to prettify the names that the first settlers gave to the distinctive features of their surroundings. It is to be hoped that the United States Geographic Board is not moved by the existence of these homely place names to attempt to improve upon them.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Burlesque.

WHEN RATS are allowed the free run of a neighborhood for any length of time they grow as bold as tomcats, and that is what has happened in the case of the burlesque branch of the drama, intimately known to the trade as louse-opera. Cardinal Hayes and many other religious leaders in New York have protested against this filth, and far from slinking back into the sewer from which it came burlesque is making a show of defiance and talking about its rights, as though lisease had rights.

This form of vice has spread over much of the country, but New York, as usual, seems to have been the point of infection. There were a lot of old, mildewed theaters in town which weren't earning their taxes, and the promoters began in a small way with a few limp and listless hags who performed with all the animation of a night watchman. The scenery was old and dirty and the dialogue of the comedians even more so. Naturally the shows made money. Any time a showman is allowed to display naked women he can make money, and it wasn't long until burlesque crept uptown to occupy a number of theaters which had been dark for years.

• • • •

FROM NEW YORK the naked-woman shows spread out, and when Chicago, in the depth of the depression, determined to go through with a World's Fair planned in the reckless days of the boom it was not art or science or culture but lust that saved the venture. The girls in some of the more pretentious exhibitions were pretty and artful, but there were others on display at so much per peek in the fair grounds and in back room dumps around town who were tramps. Texas then adopted the same policy as a means of saving the investment in a fair, and meanwhile the burlesque show had become standard entertainment in many cities, big and little.

The nakedness of the females is just that, and all talk of art in connection with the strip-tease is obvious ballyhoo, but even the appeal to the lust of the customers is less rotten than the remarks of the males who are listed as comedians. The humor in the main has to do with sexual depravity—a topic which has been made almost a household word through repetition in the more or less pretentious revues and in the murmured innuendoes of the whispering smut singers of the cocktail rooms. However, the burlesque comedy is by far the lowest of all, so vile that even the showmen themselves have wondered if there wasn't a limit somewhere and tried to find it without success.

Always when complaint is made of nakedness or oral filth in a show the answer is that the show people themselves are unaffected by their own stuff and that they are all one big, happy, virtuous family backstage—which is just true enough to establish the basis for an argument. But when Sam Scribner, now 77 years old, who established the old Columbia burlesque system, declares that old-time burlesque was just good, clean fun he apparently forgets a few phases.

• • • •

IT IS TRUE that the Columbia Theater in New York gave harmless burlesque, and the cast may have been, as he suggests, home-loving, God-fearing wage-earners and artists. But old-time burlesque in Chicago, at least, was different, for there was one famous old house on State street in which, at the end of the show, the comedian auctioned the girls of the cast to customers in the audience, who claimed them then and there and took them, still in costume, to the beer hall in the rear. Possibly they married and settled down in the suburbs to raise large families of respectable Americans, but from the way things seemed to be going about midnight that was impossible.

Mr. Scribner may remember, too, that the prosecution of Jack Johnson, the Negro former heavyweight champion, and his term in prison for violation of the Mann Act had to do with an exception to the rule of happy, virtuous camaraderie in an old-time burlesque troupe.

It is a good thing that a group of rabbis have joined the protest against burlesque, because Jewish names have been prominently associated with the most flagrant violations of decency, and an anti-Semitic group have exploited this fact. The customers, of course, are a heterogeneous lot, with nothing in common but their love of filth, but they are nameless. If the revolt of the clergy continues and is taken up elsewhere it would be important to ascertain the names of the people who own the theater in which the vice is presented. Often in the days of the old brothels periodic inquiries by reformers revealed that some of the best families in town were living on the rent from some of the worst dives in the section.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Oh, Say, Can You See?

("Tattooing people's social security number on their bodies has become a fad."—News item.)

My number I'll no more mislay—
I can't forget the thing again;
Those figures from the U. S. A.
Won't bother me like other men,
I've got them now upon my chest—
Put there with artistry and care;
It seems to me all for the best
To have my "marker" tattooed there.

II.

My Uncle Quent, whose memory
Was never very, very much,
Is free from worry now for he
Has also felt the needle's touch;
He's had a wondrous work of art
Done on his hide in red and blue—
A flag, a lady's head, a heart
And six-four-seven-five-three-two!

III.

Aunt Minnie, who could never think
Of what her U. S. number was,
Is mentally now in the pink
And very buoyant just becuz
She has a rose upon her hip—
A lily and a cupid's phiz—
An anchor and a battleship,
To tell her where her number is!

IV.

My Grandma Whipple's mood is light—
The tattoo gent was here today;
He'll have her tattooed by tonight,
And put her number where 'twill stay
Within a group of birds and bees,
Some flowers and a great big star,
So when the State says, "Number, please!"
She will not have to look too far!

V.

Now Grandpa Whipple's been to town
And had his epidermis done;
He sits around in dressing gown
And shows the work to every one;
He's had the Maine (before the wreck)
Tattooed in hues that badly blend—
And had it all done on his neck
"Where I get all things in the end!"

VI.

My girl is in a quandary—
She wants her number on her, too;
She's put the matter up to me,
And I don't know just what to do.
To put it on her thigh she would,
But this idea distresses me . . . .
I don't see why those numbers should
Be always where the world can see!

VII.

I've heard of some sad cases, but
There's that of my good uncle Jack:
The tottooer got stewed and put
His pension number on his back!
Now when some letter, duly signed,
Asks for the numerals gee, whiz!
He has to send for help to find OUT WHAT HIS U. S. NUMBER IS!

Fulpan On The Cost Of Living

Congressman States Theory Of Prices For Petunia.

By Louis M. Jiggitts,
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Petunia,
March 23, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

Several ladies have decided to organize the Petunia Housewives' Association Against the High Cost of Living, and I have been elected corresponding secretary. We want to know why the high cost of living is coming back so fast and it was suggested that as one of our leaders you could tell us why.

We should like to hear from you as soon as possible so that we can begin our campaign against whatever it is. We hope you will join us in this crusade.

Yours very truly,
MRS. PATSY PLUMPER.

Washington, D. C.
March 25, 1937.

Mrs. Patsy Plumper,
Petunia.
My dear Mrs. Plumper:

I congratulate you upon your crusade, and I can assure you that the Congressman is completely opposed to the high cost of living. I know he will be delighted to join your worthy association.

Please do not heistate to write whenever you desire any information.

Yours Sincerely,
WILLA DOOLITTLE,
Secretary.

P. S. The Congressman sends his best regards to his good friend, Mr. Plumper, and whenever he can be of service to either of you, please let him know.

Petunia.
March 27, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I thank your secretary for the cordial invitation to write you about the important matter we have in mind. We realize that we must look to Washington for leadership. Only a few years ago all most of us knew about a Congressman was that he sent seed every spring and ran for office every other year. But now we are Washington conscious and realize how important our Congressmen really are. The Verbena County Weekly Bugle & Gazette carries news every week from the Capitol and quite often has pictures of celebrities. Only last week they had your picture on the front page with other Washington leaders, but I think the editor should have put you on top of rather than under the Cabinet. Don't you.

I hope you will forgive me for writing this rather chatty letter, but I suppose you have plenty of leisure these days. I see from the papers that Congress has been marking time until the Supreme Court issue is settled. And I also noticed in the Congressional Records, which you sent my neighbor, Mrs. Fannie Sitz, that you don't meet every day until 12 o'clock noon and usually get through in a few hours.

Please let us hear about the matter we are interested in as soon as possible.

You are not eligible to join our organization unless you are a housewife.

Yours very truly,
MRS. PATSY PLUMPER.

P. S. You performed a last service for my Percy several years ago.

Washington, D. C.
March 29, 1937.

Mrs. Patsy Plumper,
Petunia.
My Dear Mrs. Plumper:

I am sure that the Congressman regrets that he is not a housewife.

I assure you that the Congressman has no leisure these days. Several years ago all a Congressman had to do was send seed, attend roll call, and then go back to his office until the bell rang notifying him to go over and vote. He also had to recommend a few postoffice appointments, but in those days everybody didn't want to be postmaster. Now the Congressman is always busy. There are so many departments and agencies to get jobs from, and he also has to give attention to legislation. If he's not alert they'll pass a bill so quick some times it's already a law before he can read it. But, of course, Congressman Fulpan is always alert. In fact, as a leader, he is always consulted.

Trusting that this information will be helpful to you, I am

Yours sincerely,
WILLA DOOLITTLE.
Secretary.

P. S. I am sure that the Congressman enjoyed doing Mr. Percy the service several years ago.

Petunia.
April 1, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I am sorry you are so busy and I will not take up your time more than necessary. Just please let us know what is causing the high cost of living so that we can begin our campaign. Some of the ladies are getting impatient for the crusade.

Yours very truly,
MRS. PATSY PLUMPER.

P. S. The service you did for

CICERO FULPAN, M. C.

dear Percy was to act as his pall-bearer.

Washington, D. C.,
May 3, 1937.

Mrs. Patsy Plumper,
Petunia.
Dear Mrs. Plumper:

I regret that committee work has prevented my replying to you sooner. I have had occasion to note the rise in prices and I have given the matter some study. In my opinion, the continued rise in prices may be due to inflation, a boom, cheap money, et cetera. When we have eliminated the cause we shall eliminate the effect, and I have been thinking lately of methods to eliminate the cause. As soon as I have fully formulated my plans I will be glad to elucidate.

I am glad to note that the ladies have decided to make this crusade. They should feel it more than any one, as they spend about 80 per cent of the money.

Assuring you that it is always a pleasure to hear from you, I am,

Yours sincerely,
CICERO FULPAN, M. C.

Petunia.
April 5, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman:

I was pleased to hear from you and to learn that you are also giving thought to this important subject. I wish I could spend only 80 per cent of my money. It always costs me at least 100 per cent.

What is meant by et cetera?

Yours sincerely,
MRS. PATSY PLUMPER.

Washington, D. C.
April 7, 1937.

Mrs. Patsy Plumper,
Petunia.
My Dear Mrs. Plumper:

I regret that the Congressman has returned to committee work, but I am glad to explain "et cetera" to you. Et cetera is an old Latin phrase, sometimes written "etc.," and meaning "and so forth," and is generally used by the writer when he can't think of anything else just at the time. Like for instance, "water is composed of oxygen, etc." You know it is composed of something else, but you can't think what it is so you just put "etc." or, if you want to appear Latinized, you put "et cetera."

Trusting that this is the information you desire, I am,

Yours sincerely,
WILLA DOOLITTLE,
Secretary.

Petunia,
April 9, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

We had a meeting yesterday and decided that we would crusade against inflation which you said was one of the reasons for the high cost of living. What is inflation?

Yours sincerely,
MRS. PATSY PLUMPER.

Washington, D. C.
April 13, 1937.

Mrs. Patsy Plumper,
Petunia.
My dear Mrs. Plumper:

The Congressman is again engaged in an important conference with an exclusive group of leaders, but I am glad to give you the information you desire. Inflation is a financial condition you think you want when you haven't got it, but when you have, you wish you didn't. The Congressman says it's like champagne. It slips up on a country before any one knows it. At first you feel stimulated. You begin to feel like 30 or 40 billion dollars, and then all of a sudden the lights go out. And when you wake up you wonder what's happened.

Assuring you that it has been a pleasure to explain this important subject to you, I am

Yours sincerely,
WILLA DOOLITTLE,
Secretary.

Petunia,
April 15, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

We appreciate your secretary's explanation, but we would like for you to go more into detail, as our ideas on the subject are perhaps a bit hazy. We were somewhat surprised to learn of your experience with champagne. Mrs. Fannie Sitz said she had no idea you ever tasted it.

Hoping to hear from you shortly, I am

Yours sincerely,
MRS. PATSY PLUMPER.

Housewives Of Town Organize To Fight Rising Costs.

Washington, D. C.
April 17, 1937.

Mrs. Patsy Plumper,
Petunia.
Dear Mrs. Plumper:

Your letter has caused me no little worry. I fear that my able secretary's illustration was a bit unfortunate and has given you an erroneous impression. Of course, she was speaking entirely from hearsay, as was I when I mentioned the matter to her. Naturally in these days, with my every conscious hour, which is sometimes 18 hours a day, given to the conscientious service of my constituents, I never indulge in champagne.

Inflation is a subject that puzzles many economists. In fact, there are but few of us who really understand the money question. Strictly speaking, inflation is the increase of paper money not warranted by security. But I am of the opinion that in its effect inflation of credit can be just as dangerous. And a great increase in demand bank deposits may well be the forerunner of inflation. Then, too, a growing Government deficit makes inflation possible, because the greater the deficit the harder it will be for the Government to borrow, and then the Government has either to cut expenses or to print more money, or to devalue the dollar. I am sure you can appreciate what a cruel dilemma it puts us leaders in. We don't want to stop giving constituents jobs, we don't want to raise taxes, and we don't want to print more money.

However, I am glad to inform you that I have lately given a great deal of thought to the matter and hope to arrive at a satisfactory solution in due course.

Trusting that this will give you an adequate conception of the problem, I am

Yours sincerely,
CICERO FULPAN, M. C.

Petunia,
April 20, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

We had a meeting of the association yesterday and decided that since inflation is puzzling even to economic experts like you, perhaps we had better crusade against a boom. Will you please explain a boom.

We are sorry to hear that you have to remain conscious so long every day.

Yours very truly,
MRS. PATSY PLUMPER.

Washington, D. C.
April 22, 1937.

Mrs. Patsy Plumper,
Petunia.
Dear Mrs. Plumper:

A boom is the top side of a depression. In our recent economic history we have had cycles of booms and depressions. The booms are caused by easy money and often by speculation. People begin to believe things are going to get better forever and prices go up and up. Then suddenly they get too high and everything collapses. It is like a child blowing up a balloon larger and larger until it bursts right in its face.

I am absolutely opposed to these cycles of ups and downs and I think they can be remedied. In the future there need not be a top side or a bottom side. I am formulating a plan for an economy that will be constant. My friends have suggested that it be called the Fulpan Permanent Prosperity Plan, but I prefer to remain in the background. The fruition of my plan is all the reward I desire. Accomplishment has always been my goal, and not glory.

Assuring you that it has been a pleasure to explain the boom phenomena to you, I am

Yours very truly,
CICERO FULPAN, M. C.

Petunia,
April 24, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

We have held another special meeting. Your letter explaining a boom was read and we decided that with hot weather approaching we had better begin the crusade next fall. In the meantime we are going to fight the high cost of living by planting gardens. If you will just send us seed like you used to do we will appreciate it. You can send seed for the 12 of us to me and I will distribute them.

Assuring you that we have complete confidence in your ability to stop a boom without our help, I am

Yours sincerely,
MRS. PATSY PLUMPER.

P. S. I never heard of money being easy. It has always been hard to get in Petunia.

Washington, D. C.
April 26, 1937.

Mrs. Patsy Plumper,
Petunia.
My dear Mrs. Plumper:

I regret to inform you that the Congressmen are not furnished free seed any more. But I am sure that Congressman Fulpan will be glad to arrange a government seed loan for you.

Assuring you that it will be a pleasure to render this service, I am

Yours sincerely,
WILLA DOOLITTLE,
Secretary.

Petunia,
April 28, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

We understand why you don't have free seed as we have noticed in the paper lately that the government has decided it must economize. From what the papers say it seems they think maybe they ought to balance the budget sometimes. As we want to help the government, we have decided not to use any of its money for seed. We will just buy our own.

In behalf of the Petunia Housewives' Association Against the High Cost of Living, I want to thank you for all you have done for us and the valuable information which you have supplied.

Yours sincerely,
MRS. PATSY PLUMPER.

Mrs. Patsy Plumper,

Dear Mrs. Plumper:

I appreciate your kind remarks and I assure you that it is always a pleasure to serve you.

I have enjoyed assisting you in your worthy crusade, and I am sure that your fine efforts will bring results.

Yours sincerely,

Mr. Chamberlain's Budget.

London.

MR. CHAMBERLAIN'S last budget has been presented to Parliament. His political opponents will have a hard time in pulling it to pieces, for he has avoided the pitfalls of which they warned him, and has done almost exactly what they urged him to do. Criticism is expected to come from his own political supporters, who may find his virtuous finance a little too virtuous for their liking.

The results for the financial year just closed came out very close to the estimates presented a year ago. Actual expenditure was £802,880,000 against £813,390,000 in original and supplementary estimates; actual revenue was £797,290,000 against an estimate of £798,380,000. Budgeting in England is a much more exact affair than in Washington.

Mr. Chamberlain calculates that on the basis of existing taxation the revenue for the present financial year would be £23,230,000 higher than last year, as a result of increased yield from income and surtaxes, from customs and excise. Quite apart from the £80,000,000 he proposes to borrow and spend during the year on armaments, his estimates of expenditure for the year shows an increase of £38,450,000 at £862,840,000. He has to provide extra revenue to bridge the gap of £15,220,000. This he does by putting an extra 3 pence on the standard rate of income tax, which will now be 5 shillings in the pound. The yield of this extra 3 pence will be about £13,000,000 in the rest of the present year, and £15,000,000 in a full year.

His gap for the present year is closed. But he has introduced a new graded tax on company profits which he anticipates will bring him a yield of £2,000,000 in the present year, and 20,000,000 to 25,000,000 in the next full year. This extra source of revenue has been introduced to provide for extra rearmament expenditures.

• • • •

THE NEW PROFITS TAX is a complicated affair. It is designed to tax the increase in company profits over a previous standard. From company profits in the year of assessment is subtracted either 6 per cent on the capital employed in the business, or the average profit for the years 1934-35-36. The choice lies with the company. The tax is levied on the excess over the standard. The tax charged will be one-fifth of the excess up to 10 per cent on the capital, plus one-fourth the amount of the excess between 10 per cent and 15 per cent on the capital, plus one-third of everything over 15 per cent. The intention of the authorities is to collect some of the profits which have grown during recovery, and which may grow further as a result of any inflationary armament expenditure.

Companies with profits of under £2,000 a year are exempt from payment; on those which pay the tax will be severe. Its burden does not compare with the excess profits duty which was levied at the close of the war, at the rate of 80 per cent of profits in excess of the rate in the standard year. But it is sufficiently severe to attract quite a lot of criticism, but not from the left-wing parties.

For the tax is placed fairly on the shoulders of those most able to bear it. The chancellor has avoided the temptation to tax commodities, and so collect revenue by indirect methods which bear most heavily on the poorer classes. Granted the need for rearmament, and granted the previously announced decision to borrow £80,000,000 a year toward the cost of armaments, the chancellor could hardly have produced a more just budget.

His critics will have to confine their attacks in the main to the two premises. All this rearmament would have been unnecessary, runs the complaint, if only the government had stuck to a courageous foreign policy; it would still be unnecessary if, even at this late hour, the government would stiffen its backbone, stand firm for a courageous democracy. Secondary lines of attack will be against the inflationary policy of borrowing for rearmament. The government is called profligate in preparations for war, but parsimonious in the arts of peace.

MR. CHAMBERLAIN broadcast to the country on his budget. He would so much have liked to have given relief of taxation. But the accident of history has made it necessary not of course to expand our armaments, but merely to make up for the deficiencies in our arms which have accumulated during recent years. A strong Britain is the best guarantee of peace. The interesting point about this argument is its peculiar passivity. No responsibility is assumed by the government for contributing in any way to the creation of the present political position in Europe. It is merely "an accident of history."

In the document presented to the House of Commons on budget day is printed a statement of the national debt. Item No. 2 in the external debt section is called "U. S. A. Government Loan ($4,368,000,000), equal at par of exchange to £897,534,000." This is one of our very few official recognitions of the American war debt. It is, we hope, evidence of our fundamental honesty. Times are difficult; like Mr. Micawber, we are forced to give a note of hand instead of a cash payment. But, at least, the debt is still on the books.

The war debt is not a subject in which you can interest either the British public or the administration. The public, if its opinion were asked, would probably say pay the lot. The administration would prefer, if you don't mind, not to talk about it. It is being discussed in some of the various committees and conferences which are being held to improve Anglo-American relations. But the Englishman has no conception of the significance of the issue to Americans.

In the past we lectured America on the impossibility of making payment while America refused to accept goods and services which were all we could offer. We just couldn't transfer the money to America without wrecking the foreign exchange. Unfortunately for this argument we have in recent years found means to transfer very large sums to America for capital investment. Gold has flowed into America at record speed. The English do not connect this in any way with a possible payment of the debt, and they think it rather indelicate of the Americans to discover any such association.

IT IS SURPRISING to find that many prominent Englishmen think the initiative for a settlement should come from America. England, they say, was struggling along with a token payment when the Johnson act was passed, which gratuitously insulted us by classing us with common defaulters. The Englishman could not be expected to distinguish between legal significance of the Attorney General's ruling that token payment did not constitute default, and the Congressional resolution which deemed token payments along with complete defaults.

The best measure of the gulf which separates the attitude of the two countries on the question is the sums which are mentioned in discussion. Presumably the sort of offer from Britain which might have a chance of being acceptable in America would be for payment of £15,000,000 a year for 40 years. The sort of offer which is discussed by even those of us who would really like to clear the whole thing up is perhaps £3,000,000 to £5,000,000 a year for a similar period. It is probably wiser not to make any offer until this gap has been made much narrower.

Not Enough Clark Gables

Hats can be taken off—but that's all—to George D. Richards, of Ocean City, N. J., who as director of public safety will keep the resort at least esthetically safe this summer. No topless swim suits for men will be allowed. Hear him: "Bathing without shirts may be all right for well-set-up young men, but not for the fellows with bulging stomachs. There are too few Clark Gables on the beach." With separation of the Gables from the Falstaffs likely to hurt somebody's feelings, a sweeping decree is thus edicted.

Director Richards' solicitude is purely masculine; quite chivalrously he makes no comment as to what some women look like in beach garb, whatever its above-waist yardage. And being a fair man, he first inspected the sunny sands of Florida before voicing his chest-covering ultimatum. There remains one consolation for local pride; evidently the Gulf Stream bathers are no more Apolloesque than those at home.

The Japanese Vote

Repudiation Of Hayashi Government May Lead To Special Diet Session At Which Minseito-Seiyukai Support Will Be Sought.

By Frank H. Hedges.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Tokyo.

IN ANY COUNTRY where genuine parliamentary politics are practiced, the defeat of the goverhment at the polls would be followed by that government's resignation. Will Premier General Senjurn Hayashi and his still incomplete cabinet resign following the general election in which they were overwhelmingly defeated? It is most unlikely. Rather, the Premier will probably request a short extraordinary session of the Diet in midsummer, during which he will test the attitude of the Minseito-Seiyukai majority in the House toward his government and his policies.

These two parties are timid and undoubtedly will be glad to co-operate with the Premier if he will but give them half a chance to do so, but they cannot yield to the point of becoming what the Nazi party in Germany has become. To do so would mean their extinction as even the weakest of powers in the state, and to this they will not consent. Japan possesses something of a genius for compromise, and hence a compromise may be worked out in this case, if only the extremist element in military circles is willing to make some concessions. If it is not, then the government must resign or request another dissolution and still another general election in the hope of obtaining a majority.

Government Expected To Bargain For Support.

DURING THE NEXT two months and more the government may be expected to bargain with individual members of all the parties in the hope of obtaining such a majority support, but that it will succeed seems most unlikely. The parties are fighting for their very lives, and, while they may be willing to co-operate with the government as parties, very few individual members will renounce party loyalty unless a "new party" is really formed. A month ago the Seiyukai was on the verge of disintegration, when the bombshell of dissolution once again united it.

The whole nation, rightly or wrongly, feels that this particular dissolution was unconstitutional. The Premier frankly announced that he had requested the throne for dissolution in order to discipline the parties, but the nation fails to see where the government gets authority for such disciplining. If, next summer, there should be a second dissolution of the House this resentment against the government would but be intensified.

There is to be heard much talk from all quarters—government, party and military—about "constitutional policies peculiar to Japan." Nobody knows exactly what this phrase means and no two groups unite in their interpretation of it, but apparently it is working itself out in practice now.

Does it mean dissolution after dissolution until the government finally obtains control of the Diet? That, quite evidently, is the interpretation of the more extreme military faction. Does it mean the Western type of democracy adapted and remodeled somewhat to fit peculiar Japanese conditions and psychology? That is the interpretation placed upon it by the political parties. Does it mean a governing class similar to that outlined in Plato's Republic? That is the view of the younger bureaucrats beyond question.

Parliamentary Forms Must Be Adapted To Japan.

IT IS TRUE that to succeed parliamentary politics in Japan must not be taken over bodily from the United States or Great Britain, but must be reshaped to fit Japanese needs and Japanese historical evolution. This process of reshaping is now under way, and it would be sheer folly or idle conceit to predict what the ultimate form will be. There is a strong trend toward a Japanese version of fascism among the military and the bureaucrats and a limited section of the general public. There is a strong trend, not so much toward the Western type of democracy as away from fascism and toward the type of very genuine democracy that existed in this empire 1,500 years and more ago, among the public at large.

One or the other of these two may triumph, or the Japanese genius for compromise and reconciliation may be able to harmonize them. The general election marks a step in this struggle, and its aftermath will be even more important.

In explaining his request for dissolution, Premier Hayashi said he desired a general election in order to let the "will of the people" express itself. When, however, the people have gone to the polls and returned a Diet substantially the same as that just dissolved, a Diet opposed to the government's course and action as they now stand and opposed to military interference in non-military affairs, will Premier Hayashi heed the "will of the people?"

Perhaps the premier, who is at least a moderate if not a mild liberal, will if he can, but there is always the important factor of the younger element, the middle strata, the "Manchukuo Party" or the military extremists to be considered. Will they, also, yield or will they still attempt to carry through their program and be able to dominate the political scene?

Younger Element Thwarted Ugaki's Attempt At Rule.

IT WAS this group which prevented Gen. Kazunari Ugaki from forming a government after he had been given the imperial command to do so. It is believed to be this group which forced dissolution and the present general election, and what it will do next when it finds a new Diet still opposed to it is problematical.

It should be emphasized that the younger element in Japan has no desire for power as such. These men have drunk of the heady wine of Japanese supremacy and are sincere in their patriotism. They are convinced (it would seem unchangeably convinced) that the program they advocate is the best possible program for the good of the empire. It is only honest to acknowledge that there is nought of self-seeking aggrandizement in the stand they have taken, but only the belief that thus will Great Japan (Dai Nihon) become greater.

In most countries an election crystallizes the political situation for a few years to come, but the recent general election promises to be merely the beginning of a new and more strenuous phase of the struggle between conflicting political ideologies which is under way in Japan. The government has been defeated; the government, nevertheless, may not resign. For the next two months political maneuverings of all sorts may be expected, the government hoping to obtain a majority through such maneuverings or perhaps reaching a workable compromise with the two major parties. If this can not be done, when the extraordinary session of the Diet meets it is more than possible that the extremists will force a second dissolution and a second general election.

RFC Mine Loans Help Government Add to Gold Store

By the Associated Press.

Uncle Sam is helping miners add to his ever-growing gold hoard by lending them money to dig the metal out of Western hills.

Reconstruction Finance Corporation officials hailed yesterday the agency's mine development lending policy as a distinct stimulus to domestic mining. They said that the impetus given the mining industry by Government purchase of gold was augmented by the RFC mine loans.

William C. Costello, assistant to the chairman of the RFC board, said loans made it possible for many domestic miners to resume operations and take advantage of the $35-an-ounce price the Government pays for newly mined gold.

The Government gold-buying policy recently has been condemned in some Congressional quarters. Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, asserting that Administration monetary operations are adding to budget-balancing problems, called for a "rational and realistic alignment of the giddy gold and silver policies under which we play sucker to the world."

Jersey Trout Streams, Catch 'Impress' Hoover

Summit, N. J., May 2 (AP).—Herbert Hoover was impressed today by the fact that within an hour and three-quarters' ride from New York City there are "beautiful streams" tempting to trout fishermen.

He took great delight in viewing these streams during his first visit to the north Jersey hills. In one of them, the Pequest River, the former President hooked a 17½-inch rainbow trout—the prize catch of his fishing trip with George C. Warren, jr., president of the New Jersey fish and game commission.

Ocean Resorts Crowded.

New York, May 2 (AP).—Bright sunshine and a temperature of 70 put New York on the move today. An estimated million persons went to ocean resorts, and 400,000 rode the subway to Coney Island alone.

Miss Boardman To Be Honored

World Tribute by Red Cross Will Be Paid to Her.

Miss Mabel T. Boardman, so long and so prominently identified with the Red Cross, will be honored at a world tribute on May 11, a dinner at the Willard Hotel in celebration of her 37 years' service as a volunteer for this organization. Greeting from 61 other Red Cross societies will be brought by Cicomte Bonabes de Rouge, of Paris, the secretary general of the League of Red Cross Societies. Admiral Cary T. Grayson, chairman of the American Red Cross, will be toastmaster.

In 1900, Miss Boardman—active in Capital society and interested in humanitarian movements—was surprised one day to find her name listed as a member of the board of incorporators of the American Red Cross. She had not been consulted, but after discussion with friends she determined to attend meetings and learned about the society. Her interest grew and she brought in other friends in Washington and other cities. The Red Cross was organized under a new charter which defined its activities, the handling of its finances and its future scope.

The MERRY WHIRL

By Marylyn

Now it can be told—a certain young thing from Washington, attending the Gold Cup race at Warrenton, made an awfully funny guess at identification. It was her first experience at any kind of a race. Arriving early she was standing about taking quite a bit of interest in what went on. Finally she saw a neatly dressed bespectacled little man, simply bristling with efficiency, approaching. He was carrying a small leather sajchel and a young lad accompanying him was struggling along with a folded up conglomeration of wood, buckles, hinges and straps. Our friend, having heard how dangerous the steeplechasing was, immediately jumped to the conclusion that this person was none other than a surgeon and that the folded up affair was an emergency operating table to be resorted to in case of some dreadful catastrophe. Finally finding herself with a group of friends near the person in question she ventured to ask him what he was. The reply came back—"Commissioner." Then there followed—"Commissioner, what kind of a commissioner?" and a puzzled frown on the inquisitive young face. The patient man answered, "Why, a financial commissioner—er——" And was interrupted by—"Oh, you mean a bookie?"

And that was that.

Polly Wirgman and her mother, Mrs. W. Wayne Wirgman, who have been traipsing around Europe, especially the countries bordering on the Mediterranean, are practically back in town. They arrive in New York aboard the Rex on Friday and will come on down to Washington, hurry from the station to Wardman Park and reopen their apartment. Then, instead of resting up from their trip, they will be kept more than busy by the stream of callers welcoming them home and demanding news from the other side.

Mrs William E Borah is a very active little person. The other morning, bright and early, she was off walking across Q street, very deep in serious thought. She had on a light redingote of creamy tan soft crepe which flared back from the front as she walked, disclosing a frock of dark brown dotted in tan.

Betty Ralston, who wears such good-looking woolens, many of them straight from Scotland, was what might be called a titian symphony or something. Betty has the loveliest red-gold curls and peaches and cream complexion, and the other day her costume was of the same shade as her locks. The long coat, skirt and odd square hat, tied across the top with brown ribbon, were of rough wool. Even the handbag was of this same bright material, quaintly fastening with an enormous gold hook. Her pumps were of the same shade, too, and her gloves and sweater were of pale yellow. So you see what we mean by titian symphony, etc., etc.

Meet Attracts Big Gathering

Many Students Take Part in the National Park Seminary Fete.

The twenty-second annual May Day Riding Meet took place Saturday at National Park Seminary with a large percentage of the student body participating. The seminary's grounds were a perfect setting for the affair and the administration, the faculty and the student body gathered at the riding ring.

Each of the eight sororities was represented in the keen competition. The meet opened with the seat and hands class for advanced riders with the following entries: Miss Mary Burnett, Amarillo, Tex.; Miss Jane Campbell, Charleston, W. Va.; Miss Ann Crowder, Easton, Pa.; Miss Jane Dunn, Syracuse, N. Y.; Miss Edith Geissler, Jenkintown, Pa.; Miss Sally Hart, Hartford, Conn.; Miss Dorothy Hutton, Buffalo, N. Y.; Miss Jean Owen, Poughkeepsie, N. Y. These riders were required to exchange horses at the suggestion of the judges. In all the classes ribbons were awarded for horsemanship; a number of riders were on side saddle. Miss Dunn, riding her own horse, Accelerator, gave an exhibition of high jumping.

The final event of the morning was the costume ride. Leading the procession was Miss Betty Skillman, Detroit, Mich., driving an old four-seated trap and accompanied by the Misses Wanda Moller, Charleston, W. Va.; Ann Crowder, Easton, Pa., and Frances May, Shenandoah, Iowa. These girls wore old-fashioned dresses in pastel shades and wide-brimmed hats with ribbon streamers. On the program the entry read, "Gone With the Wind."

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

How to Become More Successful Socially Is Problem of Intelligent, Educated, Accomplished Girl.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: How can I become a socially more successful human being? I am young, moderately good looking and interested in a variety of things. I dance well, swim well and play tennis. I have an enthusiastic position and am always ready to take part in new adventures and experiments. I converse easily and well and am interested in people. I sincerely enjoy art, music and books. I was successful scholastically in school, and in all the many activities except the social ones.

* * * *

I have successfully held several jobs and get along well with my fellow workers. I have never wanted for girl friends; seem to impress older persons favorably and find jobs with surprising ease. But socially I'm a flop. My social opportunities are rather limited, as I work and go to school, so that my only free time is Saturday and Sunday evenings. It so happens that I do not come in contact with many young men. The ratio in my life is about six women to one man, and often the women are much superior in mentality and character. At the moment I have no boy friends at all, although during the past year I have had a fair number of dates, none with men who interested me much. I seem unable to interest the men who attract me.

* * * *

My family stood well in our home town, but here we know few people and live in a large apartment house, so family and neighborhood contacts are practically nil. I love my work and wouldn't want to sacrifice it for anything in the world, but I am not self-sufficing and social contacts are essential to my happiness.

* * * *

It is difficult for me to put a finger on my social shortcomings. Inwardly, I am a serious person, but my friends are always surprised if I tell them so. Apparently they find me witty and gay, although I am unware of being so. I am, perhaps, a little overfrank and too eager to find out about people on first acquaintance. I am fond of analyzing personalities and motives, so perhaps people find me rather prying. (This is entirely my own idea and I am not quite sure it is true.) I am somewhat oversensitive and sometimes a little shy, but not to an extent which would seriously handicap.

* * * *

I feel strongly about many things, so am rather argumentative, but seldom get angry and try hard to see all sides of a question. I am rather nervous and moody at times, but very happy for the most part. Perhaps my worst handicap is a tendency to be more interested in artistic, scientific and philosophical subjects than in the ordinary events of everyday life. I take, perhaps, too little interest in my personal appearance, yet I am certain that my appearance is neither dull nor sloppy and that I do as well as my very limited time and even more limited income allows.

* * * *

Can you find in this anything to suggest a solution of my problem? With my work and other interests I manage generally to lead a rather pleasant social life, yet I feel that with more social contacts it would be even richer. Sincerely,

VERY LONELY.

Concentrate on Appearance.

DEAR LONELY: You seem to know much about you inner self and the possible effect it has on others, but what do you know about your outer self and the impression it creates? Your interest in things artistic, scientific and philosophical must be presented in attractive dress, so to speak, if it is to get you anywhere with men. Thus presented, it should take you far.

* * * *

Since you are willing to admit that you "take, perhaps, too little interest in your appearance, and if the most that can be said for it is "neither dull nor sloppy," it must be that your looks constitute a considerable social handicap where men are concerned. No woman who looks less than her very best at all times looks well enough to hold her own against a modern world full of attractive women, each out to get and keep her man (whether or not she admits it).

* * * *

You are not budgeting your time intelligently if you don't systematically devote some part of every day to improving your appearance—and I mean improving. If you want men who have known and ignored you for years to sit up and take appreciative notice, be good looking! You may have buck teeth, squint eyes, flat feet and a poor complexion and still pass for good looking if you work to emphasize your good points and play down your bad ones.

* * * *

Good looks begin with good health—or the illusion of it—which means clear skin, shining hair, splendid carriage and trim figure lines. Cosmetics and earnest effort can supply what nature failed to provide. Proper diet, rest and exercise are helpful; but so are cosmetics for the skin, a diligently wielded hair brush and the offices of an expert coiffeur for the hair; and special gymnastics for good body lines. Carriage is a matter of finding out how to handle your body most effectively and then doing it unremittingly. It has to do with the set of the shoulders, the poise of the head, the tilt of the chin, the slant of the spine.. It has to do with walking, standing and sitting.

* * * *

Good looks are pre-eminently a matter of intelligence and character. It takes intelligence to visualize perfection in anything and character to work indefatigably to achieve the ideal. While getting your physical self in shape,, study dress. Knowledge of dress is an indispensable part of every cultivated woman's education. You can learn to dress smartly and becomingly within your means, if you will to do so.

* * * *

It's a question of knowing what you can wear and what you shouldn't wear, in fabrics, colors, lines, accessories, and so on. Learn how to make every purchase count, so that you can wear, with never-failing effectiveness, every item of your wardrobe until it virtually falls to pieces from honest service rendered.

Incidentally, your letter suggests that you may be, quite unawarely, far more interested in yourself than in other people, despite your convictions to the contrary. Certainly you are more introspective and analytical of self than the average person and like all such inward-looking individuals, seem inclined to give yourself the best of the analysis. No man is likely to linger long in the company of a woman who seems more interested in herself than him; unless, indeed, she happens to possess almost fatally fascinating beauty of face and figure, or irresistible psychic allure.

* * * *

Never allow your curiosity concerning others' lives and motives to range beyond the limits of well-bred interest, and don't pass up the society of men you don't specially care for. I remember the novelist Faith Baldwin's telling me once that the road to marriage, for women, lies along the road of "meeting men—lots of men." And a man is excellent passport to the company of other men. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

CAPITAL MANNERS

Calling Cards Should Be Left in Person at the White House.

By Margaret Wallace.

THE PROPRIETY of mailing visiting cards to the White House is puzzling a group of women whose husbands are employed in the Government. Many people come to Washington and wish to pay their respects to the President and his family, and yet hesitate to do so because they do not know the exact procedure.

The spokesman for this group of women writes:

"Our husbands have positions in the Government, but we all are strangers in Washington. We wish to call at the White House, but want to do so according to Washington standards. Will you kindly tell us if it is correct to mail our visiting cards to Mrs. Roosevelt, with our addresses written in the corners? Or should we leave these cards at the door? We should like to be invited to Mrs. Roosevelt's public functions, but we do not wish to push ourselves nor do the improper thing. We will appreciate an early reply in your splendid column in The Post."

It never is polite to mail visiting cards to the White House. They always must be delivered "by hand." It is proper to write the address in the corner. A "Mr. and Mrs." card may be left, or a card from the wife and another from the husband, as it is proper for the gentleman to call on the President if his wife calls on Mrs. Roosevelt. The cards should be left at the front door of the White House.

Another group of strangers in Washington wants to know how to call on their Senator and his wife. They write:

"We knew our Senator and his wife back in our home State, and we feel sure that they would invite us to their teas and entertainments if they knew we are in Washington. When should we call?"

Cards should be left at the door of the home of the Senator and his wife, with the Washington address on them. It is proper to leave cards during the calling hour, from 4 to 7 o'clock.

Another hostess asks:

"May I invite to dinner persons on whom I have not called? May I invite couples I do not know to dinner if the husbands are business associates of my husband? Should I call on the wives first before sending the invitations?

It is, of course, polite to call on persons before inviting them to dinner. It is proper to invite a husband's business associates and their wives to dinner, even though the hostess does not know them. Cards must be left before the invitations are sent. The cards should include "Mr. and Mrs." cards, or separate cards for husband and wife. The gentleman's card, of course, is intended for a call on the man of the family.

An exception to the rule of calling or leaving cards before sending an invitation is when those invited are in Washington for a day or very short time. Then the hostess should telephone or send a note if it is not possible to make the call before the dinner. Hostesses who have made their rounds of calls during the season may send invitations to those they have called on during the season without the formality of a before dinner invitation call.

Expert Classifies Movie Stars By Observing How They Walk

Joan Blondell's Gait Typical of American Girl; Women Advised to Avoid Bending Knees and Remember to Relax for Correct Carriage.

By Carolyn Abbott.

NEARLY every girl today is taught proper gait and posture. But that is not enough to insure her graceful and distinctive movement. She should study her personality and develop the proper kind of walk to harmonize with it.

This is the belief of Gertrude L. Mayer, director of a noted academy for mannequins. On a recent visit to Hollywood, Miss Mayer made a special study of movie actresses in relation to their walks. Her classification of their gaits may hold interest for girls who belong to the types these actresses represent.

Joan Blondell Miss Mayer classified as having the walk of a typical American girl. She holds herself erect and has a brisk, quick step. The gait has been acquired, not as a gift from the gods, but as a result of long effort. Joan reports that when she first saw herself on the screen she didn't know whether to laugh or to cry. She held herself so rigidly upright she resembled a wooden soldier. She began at once to correct her walk and now combines an ideal carriage with perfect grace.

Ruby Keeler—College Girl.

Ruby Keeler, according to Miss Mayer, has the youthful, easy swing of a college girl, representing the co-ordination of mind and muscle that is stressed in college gymnasium classes. Ruby's extensive dancing and golf pursuits have developed this attribute.

Miss Mayer considers Olivia de Havilland a marvel of grace. She can wear costumes without self-consciousness, especially the voluminous and unfamiliar period clothes which are the true test of a girl's inherent grace.

Bette Davis shows rare talent in adjusting her walk and carriage to the character she portrays. Such ability is also convenient in off-screen life, because different clothes require slightly different bearings. It is Miss Mayer's opinion that shoulders should be held absolutely straight for formal clothes, while a more relaxed posture is correct for sports things.

Anita Louise—Debutante.

Anita Louise walks as a debutante should, but too frequently does not. Hers is a typically feminine manner, with sureness in her step and distinction in her posture.

Miss Mayer gives the following suggestions to women who would improve their walk and posture:

When you are walking, remember bent knees are particularly awkward. Although knees should be absolutely straight, the body must be relaxed from the waist down. A relaxed body does not mean that it should sway from side to side. Although your carriage varies slightly with the type of clothes you are wearing, generally speaking, shoulders and hips should be held straight, chest must be cut, stomach in. The casual slouch of flapper days is quite as unfashionable as rolled stockings and shingled bobs.

Miss Mayer warns that girls must beware of the duck walk. She emphasizes that toes should point directly ahead and should reach the floor a fraction of a second before the heel. There is over-determination and lack of femininity in the woman who comes down hard on her heels.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

PICTURES have an awful lot to do with giving the spring spirit to a home. Five copies of the old masters and a cherished portrait of great grandfather are distinguished in the winter and you like them because they're solid and safe and give an air of stability and comfort and mellow beauty to a firelit room. But when the lilacs are blooming, it's time to relegate the old masters and great grandfather to the attic and hang up fresh clear pictures that aren't so serious and sober. Flowers or bird prints or etchings . . . a copy of a bright modern painting or some casual decorative picture that appeals. Simple frames are nicest for pictures like these . . . sometimes they can be painted to repeat a color in the room.

And experiment with interesting groupings . . . four small uniformly framed pictures to go over the mantel for instance, two above the other, with or without a wall paper border around the grouping to tie them together. This arrangement is a pleasant change from the expected large painting, and it's not a bad idea for the year around if you don't have a large picture of importance and do have small ones that you'd like to spotlight. Or put them over your sofa if that's your problem wall.

We saw a living room that looked so cool and refreshing, not altogether because the pictures were hung this way over the mantel, but we're certain they had something to do with it. Aquamarine walls, a printed linen slip cover predominantly terra cotta for the sofa, gossamer white net curtains and no draperies, a deeper than aqua rug, slip covers for the chairs in white and deeper-than-aqua shade of blue-green, accessories in crystal, white porcelain and terra cotta. The pictures were framed in white painted frames and the molding around the grouping was, like the woodwork, painted white. A sparkling room for summer or winter.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, May 2.

BILLIE TAUSSIG, of Hollywood, dropped in the other day to trade memories of the days when she was secretary to a sub-editor of the late New York World and I was punching out advertising copy and writing little feature stories for the cream in my coffee. Now she is Taussig, Inc., and is known as the gal who taught the movie stars some new tricks — when they thought they knew them all!

ALICE HUGHES.

When the World folded, tragically, some five years back, Billie went out to the coast to have a look around. The line she heard oftenest from the movie actresses was "But, my dear, I haven't a single minute!" So she decided to give the luscious slaves of the studios some minutes.

Being very alert and quick on the uptake, La Taussig quickly launched a one-girl business, offering to do everything for the stars but act and draw their pay. Clients began to call her in moments of stress and strain. She fired their cooks and hired new cookery geniuses. She sent out invitations to parties, arranged the catering, guarded against chiselers and gate-crashers, phoned them in the mornings to get them up and laboring on time and performed all the dozens of time-snatchers that harass the Dream Girls. Little by little the business waxed and grew fast, and now Billie says she has six hirelings taking up the slack for the movie people.

Billie is still Billie—the competent, aggressive executive; the six are the "Inc." And it is profitable and often amusing. Billie is now east on a visit looking over us serfs while the "Inc." carries on 3,000 miles away.

Her next department will be the hiring of a good 24-hour worrier to worry for the stars when their contracts expire. Billie Taussig is an elegant example of a smart girl who literally made a lot out of nothing at all.

* * * *

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—The next girl who says "but definitely!" to me is going to get a smart smack to the jaw from me. Is that goshawful cliche rampant among you? It is the lineal descendant of those one-time horrors, "and how" and "and I don't mean maybe!" Let the crusade go on! But definitely! . . .

* * * *

Sitting in my booth at Rose Laird's salon de beaute the other day, I nearly jumped out from under the drier as I heard the sound of rending paper and a sweet voice raised in anger. Discreet inquiry disclosed that the girl in the next cell was the glorious Grace Moore, of Jellico, Tenn., and the world. She had been reading a movie magazine article about her which, to understate it, she didn't like. The story said that Grace lived in daily fear of losing her voice. La Moore looks gorgeous, and her pipes retain all their pristine power . . .

* * * *

I stepped into something when, speaking to the American Society of Newspaper Editors in Washington, I told them that the new trinity, consisting of beauty, social ease and style, formed glamour and now was American womanhood's prime interest. Bill Lengyl, movie-story editor and a novelist, too, challenges me sharply, saying that housewifery still leads the parade, and that the homemaker deserves a better title than "housewife." Something like "executive manager," probably on a brass plate over the sink. Well, Bill and I shall probably debate the question in a telephone booth at the Astor Hotel . . .

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

Personality Haircut.

Everybody says you really ought to do something about your hair. With that old-fashioned bun on your neck you're beginning to look like—well Radcliffe 1911. You might get by with it if you were a "type." As it is, you're only a dowdy gentlewoman. A new haircut would make you look ten years younger and—maybe a little unpredictable.

You weaken. You have been too much of a poke . . . all your life. Well, you'll show 'em you're not so slow. You'll take a chance—at least a small one!

You call on Monsieur Jacques. It is only a consultation, you remind him. You have not fully decided—

Monsieur understands perfectly. You are a conservative type, he can readily see. "Nothing extreme or bizarre for Madame! It would be unthought of!"

He lifts appraisingly one of your tresses, fondles it with his razor. It drops to the floor. You gasp!

Do not be alarmed, says Monsieur Jacques, flashing his razor about your head. He is not cutting your hair—that is, not REALLY cutting it. Just a little out here . . . and there . . . and at the back, to sculpt the head. He will give you a "dignified" coiffure, nothing "cheap or usual." Something distinctive, but of course also youthful.

* * * *

Flying hair whirls about your head. You really have a wonderful hairline—at least in one spot, Monsieur Jacques has discovered. You have been concealing all your good points. Well, he will bring them out. He will give you a new personality.

"Ah, individuality—it is the only beauty!" philosophizes Monsieur, gesticulating with his razor. Your coiffure must be created to express the individual soul that is YOU! The REAL YOU!

Ah, this regimentation of feminine beauty. These sheeplike women with heads all alike. It is too much for Monsieur Jacques. He feelingly whacks off a neat little piece of hair over your ears you had spent ten years growing.

"Isn't . . . isn't that enough on that side?" you feebly suggest.

"A Jacques coiffure must reveal the lines of the head," says Monsieur firmly. He waves his razor. Too much hair is cheap, common, "like the peasant."

You subside. Snip! Snip! Snip! He stops . . . But no! He cannot resist a little strand he finds on the temple, a little tuft behind the ear. With what saddistic delight he wields the razor.

He is through. You stare at the apparition in the mirror. A lady scientist after a long day in the laboratory! . . . Or a none-too-bright inmate of a woman's reformatory!

* * * *

You have been given a permanent—a Jacques personality permanent by an assistant and are back in the maestro's hands. Deftly brandishing his comb (you are not quite sure it isn't a razor) he shapes your baked ringlets into neat, glossy little sausages. You venture to pull one further over a nude blushing ear.

"But Madame!" Monsieur is outraged. "You are destroying the line."

You sit meekly seeing a funny spot you had spent your life hiding brought into prominence. Then you take courage. Perhaps if you tried the light touch . . .

"Monsieur, I realize it is most presumptuous for me to make a suggestion to a great artist like yourself"—you smile, but he is only gravely attentive—"but—well, you see, there is just one place——"

He shakes his head firmly. If the line is changed it will not be a Jacques haircut! Everybody will know that it is not a Jacques haircut.

He has finished. You look dubiously at the utterly strange woman in the mirror. Still, it is not as bad as you had feared. At least you are "different." And well maybe—maybe this is the true YOU, the deep, mysterious YOU that Monsieur Jacques has sculptured out of your soul.

* * * *

On the street the chill air strikes the back of your head. You feel like Lady Godiva. You sense the stares of the passers-by. Everybody is looking at you. How will you ever face your friends?

You run headlong into Stella Gadd. "How ARE you?" she asks, but does not let you tell her. She's downtown to buy a new suit for Junior who's going to play in a piano recital and to get a little cape dress for herself. They're going to Harrisburg to see Edgar's people and did you know that Maud was marrying a big oil man in June? Not a word about your new personality!

You go on down the street. How familiar the back of that woman's head looks! It—it is just like yours! She must have a Jacques haircut.

An elderly matron sweeps past. Her hair, too, is brushed back up from the temple—yes, and into a slanting roll!

A young girl with her boy friend steps out of a drug store. What pretty little curls she has above her ears. Just like yours!

Well, it doesn't seem to look as if you were going to be such a lonely soul after all.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Logan Clendening.

Diabetes Treatment.

A great many years ago it was found that in undertaking the treatment of diabetic patients it is valuable to give the patient a little booklet which he can study and have by him until he has learned to know the nature of the disease and the routine of treatment. I believe the first of these was the "Diabetic Manual" of Dr. Joslin, of Boston. When Dr. Joslin's book was first put on the market, it was devoted almost entirely to food and the dietetic treatment. The latest of these books is by Dr. A. M. Sindoni, called "Diabetes: A Modern Manual."

The notable thing in this Modern Manual is that at least a fifth of the book is taken up with discussion of insulin, and half of the discussion on insulin is devoted to the new form, protamine-zinc insulin.

Newest Development.

This newest development in the control of diabetes were introduced only a short time ago from research work done at Copenhagen, Denmark. There a Dr. Hagedorn and his associates prepared a substance called "protamine" from the sperm of a fish. It was found that when this was mixed with pure insulin it formed a light, milky liquid compound, which, when injected into the body, has the action of insulin but the action is prolonged.

More recent research has discovered that if zinc, protamine and insulin are mixed with a buffered solution, the addition of the zinc will still further prolong the effect of protamine insulin. It is harmless and will produce no ill-effects when given hypodermically with the protamine insulin.

The effect of pure insulin, which was discovered about 1922, is to burn sugar in the body. This, of course, is just what the diabetic needs. Pure insulin, when given hypodermically, begins to act immediately and the height of its action is about half an hour after injection. Its action is over almost always in three or four hours. Protamine insulin, on the contrary, is released slowly, and insulin gets into the blood over a period roughly four to eight times the length which ordinary insulin does. Its action is, therefore, milder and more complete. The height of its action is usually within 12 to 18 hours.

Daily Dose of Insulin.

This improvement allows a diabetic patient to take just one dose of insulin a day instead of three or four, as was necessary with pure insulin. This prevents the marked fluctuations in blood sugar that occurred under the older method, and which sometimes produced distressing symtoms in patients.

Protamine zinc insulin still must be administered, just as old insulin must, by hypodermic. It cannot be given by any other methods. It is painless and produces no ill-effect, nor is it habit forming. The time when it should be given will depend on your physician's judgment. Some give it before retiring; some before breakfast.

Dr. Joslin, who is conservative in his judgment, has recently said, "Protamine zinc insulin is here to stay."

We hope that the next development in insulin will be a form that can be used by mouth.

It must be remembered that the use of insulin does not absolve the patient from using all care with his diet.

Narrow Garters Right for Summer

New York (AP).—Newest garters for men are extremely narrow and come in light shades so as not to show through white suits. Others are washable elastic, which brings up the item that Hollywood's men are getting "garter drills" these days. The drills are intended to insure the fact that male actors wear their garters correctly when before the camera.

Milton Berle, the comedian, who has a flare for smart and correct dress, first came up with the idea that garters are worn correctly only when the pendant faces the inner side of the leg, resting on the soft, fleshy part of the calf. A bit technical, but Berle was right.

Bob Burns Says

By Bob Burns.

I believe politeness is somethin' you have'ta be born with and if you ain't got it all the finishin' schools in the world won't do anything for you.

My Uncle Slug never saw a book of etiquette in his life but still he's one of the politest men I ever saw. Not long ago I told a story about him and when he heard about it he got so mad he sat down and wrote me a scorchin' letter. He called me some terrible names and wound up by sayin' "and the next time I see ya, I'm gonna punch ya in the nose" and then he said "P. S. Please excuse pencil."

THE FEDERAL DIARY

DI—4030

Next time you want the authentic recipe for genuine Kentucky Burgoo, call District 4030. Or if you want the address of a manufacturer of rubber collars and rubber shirt fronts, call District 4030. Or data on swimming pools in Alaska, breeding colored mice, the number of 2-cent stamps sold last year, or practically anything else that bothers you—try District 4030.

The magical number is the one called some 200 times a day by people with just such requests as these. And 100 more similar requests—and many of them aren't so simple—come piling in by mail. But, whatever it is, you can be sure the United States Information Service will find the answer—if there is one.

All these questions above—from Burgoo to colored mice—have been asked, and have been answered. The Information Service takes such things without a quaver. It's really tough problems—like "By what authority is Inauguartion Day a legal holiday?"—that really set the force of 18 working. Ordinarily, they get from 250 to 300 requests a day; often it's much more. Some of the requests are made in person, some come on impressive stationery and some on scribbled post cards, many through District 4030.

The Inauguration Day question was asked 100 times. For a long while the office was stumped; workers searched Congressional statutes, executive orders, browsed in history, and finally discovered it—in the District Code. It's an inconspicuous line in a lengthy sentence headed "When negotiable instrument is payable." Inauguration Day, by the way, is specified as the particular day every fourth year, and not as a Tuesday-after-a-Monday in March.

Despite the busy work of the Information Service, its Chief, Miss Harriet M. Root, finds time to explain its operation. She points out that it is purely a fact-finding organization, does not opinionate. It was established in 1934, just when the NRA administration was giving question askers a field day. Miss Root points out that 40 per cent of the questions now come from other Government agencies, 20 from Congressmen and only 40 from the public. Says most of the questions can be answered directly; some, however, have to be referred to other offices—such as ones on trade marks, patents, crops and the like.

What surprises Miss Root is not the foolish questions that are asked, but that so few non-sensible ones are submitted. That and the multifarious activities of the Government. Occasionally the whole staff gets a chuckle out of some query. Like the newspaper man, offered a better job in Ohio, but apparently having difficulty in persuading his wife he should take it, who poured over large volumes on cost of living in the District and Ohio, carefully editing what he thought his wife might misinterpret. Miss Root would still like to know if he took the job.

Or the woman who wrote for information about bringing in a pet monkey from South America, or can four people, with their car, travel to New Zealand by steamship? Many requests are from schools and colleges—for publications. And many are for jobs. These are answered, but not encouragingly, for the Service has nothing to do with that. Some requests for jobs are odd, like the man who wanted to be official horseshoer for the Government, and the undertaker who wanted a job in a leper colony.

A man and a woman were knocked down by an automobile on Thirteenth street northwest between N and O streets, but, although the driver of the car said they were cut, they refused to make known their identity and refused hospital treatment.

The driver of the car, police said, was Ralph S. Payne, 29, 67 Seaton place northwest. The couple was intoxicated, police reports stated.

City's Catholics Unite to Honor Blessed Mother

Impressive Ceremonies at National Shrine Mark Religious Festival.

With colorful outdoor processions, crowning ceremonies and benedictions, thousands of Washington Catholics joined yesterday in opening May, the month dedicated to Mary, the Blessed Mother.

Two thousand members of the Sodality Union, which represented parishes throughout the city, met in the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception on the Catholic University campus. At a demonstration in honor of the Blessed Mother, the Right Rev. David T. O'Dwyer, director of the Shrine, celebrated solemn benediction, and the Rev. Ignatius Smith, O. P., of Catholic University, delivered a sermon on the inspiration the Blessed Mary gave the civilized world.

Immaculate Conception Church, at Eighth and N streets northwest, conducted a parish ceremony in which Rita Koontz, May Queen, crowned a statue of the Blessed Mother. Her attendants were Helen Knighting and Anne Marie Burke. Jenny Plunkert was crown bearer, and Elder Holohan and John Wilbur Gadwa, train bearers.

Dr. Cartwright Preaches.

Afterward, Dr. John Keating Cartwright, pastor of the church, preached at benediction services attended by the procession participants.

Calling attention to the reverence due the Mother of Jesus, Father Smith at Catholic University declared that Mary changed the course of all civilization.

"Even in the civilization of pagan Rome woman was the toy of the passions of men," the preacher said, "but in Mary mankind learned the dignity of womankind, and through her men learned to protect women.

"When men have been most Mary-minded civilization has advanced. Universities reared their heads in nearly every city of Europe because of the inspiration which men received from Mary."

Inalienable Rights Discovered.

Father Smith said it was through Mary that "men discovered the inalienable rights of man and the gifts of God."

"Kings, out of respect for Mary, respected the rights of their citizens," he pointed out.

"Art, music and painting—institutions of culture which take the thoughts of men out of the trenches of the material—advanced out of a desire to do something for Mary," Father Smith said.

Taking part in the Shrine ceremonies were the Rev. Stephen J. Hogan, assistant pastor of the Church of the Nativity, who gave the recitation of the Rosary; the Rev. Robert J. Froelich, assistant at St. Matthew's Church, who was deacon; the Rev. William H. Hoffman, assistant at St. Mary's Church, sub-deacon; the Rev. Robert L. Keesler, of St. Thomas the Apostle Church, who was deacon of exposition, and the Rev. J. J. Clark, spiritual director of the Sodality, who was master of ceremonies.

Peace Women Ask Mediation In Spanish War

Request Roosevelt to Act Toward Removal of Foreign Troops.

Fearful lest the Spanish conflict infect the world with war, the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom yesterday adopted a resolution urging President Roosevelt "to call for mediation with the immediate objective of withdrawing all foreign troops from Spain."

The group, meeting in the Washington Hotel, asked in a second resolution that "the Civilian Conservation Corps be placed permanently under the jurisdiction of the Department of the Interior, with civilian administration throughout the United States."

The program for today, the last morning session of the annual meeting, will include a discussion of the future of Pan American relations. Miss Heloise Brainerd, committee chairman, and Mauritz Hallgren, author of the "Tragic Fallacy," will speak.

At noon there will be a special ceremony, lead by Mrs. Ernest Gruening, in commemoration of the signing of the Rush-Bagot treaty.

Work Relief Lobby Will Invade Capital

A "women's brigade" of 200 representative wives and mothers of WPA workers will invade the Capital May 15 to lobby for a $3,000,000,000 Federal work-relief program, David Lasser, president of the Workers Alliance of America, announced yesterday.

Lasser said the women figuratively would camp on the doorsteps of Congress until it acts on an appropriation to finance work-relief during the fiscal year beginning July 1.

"They will act as a mass lobby," he said, "putting pressure on individual Congressmen and other officials to provide adequate relief funds."

Bridge Bids To Be Sought This Month

3 Spans Over Potomac to Replace Those Flood Wrecked.

Cost Set at $1,326,000; Federal Government to Pay Half.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, May 2.—Bids will be sought this month for three interstate bridges over the Potomac River which will replace a like number destroyed by the flood of March, 1936, it was learned from an authoritative source here. Bids will be advertised following announcement, expected this week, by West Virginia officials and Representative Jennings Randolph that West Virginia has approved plans for bridges at Shepherdstown, Hancock and Keyser-McCool.

The estimated cost of the bridges is approximately $1,326,000, half of which will be met by the Federal Government, which has approved plans for the bridges.

The rest of the cost will be borne equally by Maryland and West Virginia. The estimated cost of the Hancock Bridge is $876,000; Shepherdstown, $250,000, and Keyser-McCool, $200,000.

Construction may begin early in the summer. Eighteen months will be required to complete the Hancock Bridge, one year for the Shepherdstown Bridge and ten months for the Keyser-McCool span. Each of the bridges will be of steel construction. Under the plans, which have the approval of the United States Bureau of Roads, the bridges will be higher than any known high-water mark.

The Hancock Bridge will be at the west end of Hancock, with its West Virginia terminus on Brosius Hill. The bridge will span the main tracks of the Baltimore & Ohio and Western Maryland railroads, eliminating two grade crossings and will pass over the National highway on the Maryland side.

It was learned that plans for a new bridge either at Harpers Ferry or Sandy Hook, replacing Harpers Ferry Bridge, swept away by the 1936 flood, have been dropped. Harpers Ferry and vicinity are being served by the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Bridge, converted several months ago.

The present Hancock Bridge, the temporary span of which again was carried away by the recent flood, will be repaired. Another wooden temporary span, identical to the one destroyed, will be constructed and will be open for traffic in from 30 to 50 days.

D. C. Restaurants To Assist National 'Dining Out' Drive

National Restaurant Week begins today with 50,000 restaurateurs of the United States and Canada participating. The dramatic effort to acquaint the public better with the advantages of dining out will continue through Sunday.

Under the direction of the National Restaurant Association and with the co-operation of numerous local associations, including the Washington Restaurant Association, the restaurateurs are exerting special efforts along lines of decorative effects in their establishments and windows. They are featuring culinary specialties and stressing styles in foods, as in everything else.

The Commissioners of the District of Columbia yesterday issued a proclamation designating May 3 to 9 as Restaurant Week.

"We expect National Restaurant Week to produce benefits of a cumulative nature," stated R. D. Clark, president of the National Restaurant Association. "In other words, we hope through this campaign to create a habit that will become regular."

Julius Lulley is chairman of the local Restaurant Week committee.

Maryland Plans Safer Roads As Main Point in '37 Program

Widening and Elimination of Curves to Be Given Attention; New Highway Construction Planned in 3 Sections.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, May 2.—Maryland's road construction program for this year will be confined in most part to making present highways safer by widening and elmination of curves, with the new road building being around Baltimore, on the Eastern Shore and in southern Maryland, Dr. H. E. Tabler, chairman of the State roads commission, said yesterday.

Dr. Tabler said that negotiations have been in progress for some weeks with the bondholders of the old W. B. & A. Railroad and that surveys have been made for a high-speed highway over the roadbed of this railroad to Washington. He said that he expected sufficient funds to be available to complete about five miles of this proposed highway this year.

Engineers of the road commission have been studying the territory in the vicinity of Leesburg for a new bridge across the Potomac River connecting Montgomery County, but these studies had not reached a point where any immediate decision is likely, he said.

The new construction program for this year on the Eastern Shore provides for a new bridge at Ocean City, a new highway from Crisfield north for 12 miles, the Salisbury bypass, a relocation from Salisbury to Mardella Springs, and a new bridge over Cambridge Creek in Dorchester County and, in southern Maryland, relocating and continuing the Hughsville-Waldorf road.

Work will be started this week on the elimination of "Death Curve," on the national highway, 5 miles east of Hagerstown. A section of the road will be relocated. The State recently bought a farm for this purpose.

Members of the roads commission inspected a section of the new dual highway between Frederick and Hagerstown last week in preparation for asking bids for the last section of this highway in the near future. This section is east from the point where the new highway will intersect Route 40, a short distance west of Frederick. Grading and drainage contracts for the remainder of the 23-mile road are nearing completion and it is planned to lay one 22-foot concrete lane from Beaver Creek to the Hagerstown corporate limits, a distance of 3 miles, this year. The remainder of the grading will be permitted to settle for one year before the concrete lanes are laid.

Retiring Envoy, Wife Honored By 200 Chinese

Ambassador Sze, Leaving to Accept High Post, Feted at Lotus.

A farewell dinner to Ambassador Sao-Ke Alfred Sze, of China, was tendered the departing diplomat yesterday at the Lotus Restaurant by about 200 Washington Chinese.

"On behalf of Mme. Sze and myself," he said, "I give you thanks for the numerous marks of attention, courtesy and loyal co-operation the members of the Chinese community have given me on all occasions."

Dr. Sze, recalled to China, it is understood, to assume a high advisory position with his government, will leave American about the middle of May, to be replaced by the end of the month by his successor, Dr. C. T. Wang, former minister of foreign affairs.

Members of the embassy staff were present, the ladies garbed in brocaded gold, blue, green and silver smocks. Moy Sheuck, chairman of the Chinese Nationalist Party here and head of the local On Leon Tong, presided. Sing Lee, a student at Catholic University, translated speeches from Cantonese into Mandarin, the official language.

The ceremonies started with obeisances to the red flag with white sun in a blue field of China, with all present bowing three times. After speeches lasting two hours, a silver plaque was presented the ambassador on behalf of the On Leon, Hip Sing, the Nationalist Party, the Impartial Association, the Lees' Association, the Chinese Sstudents' Association, the Chinese Community Church, the Chan Association, the Moys Association and the Lees' Social Club.

Steps to Prevent Erosion of Soil Prove Success

Torrential Rains and High Waters Balked by Work in Maryland.

By the Associated Press.

College Park, Md., May 2.—Terracing, strip-cropping and other soil erosion control work sponsored by the Soil Conservation Service near Hagerstown, Harwood and White Hall stood the test of recent torrential rains in a pleasing manner, O. C. Bruce, State co-ordinator for the service, said today.

Bruce related that rain guages on the project near Hagerstown showed a rainfall of 4.07 inches during a single day. The average rainfall intensity was .116 of an inch per hour and the maximum intensity during a 90-minute period was .37 of an inch per hour. All streams were out of their banks and from 5 to 9 feet above normal.

"Farmers and technicians of the Conservation Service reported," Bruce continued, "that rainfall run-off on newly plowed fields where no erosion control measures were in effect was of the so-called 'flashy' type and did not last sx hours after the downpour. Where fields were terraced or strip-cropped, or other control measures were used, the run-off was very slight and there were practically no soil losses. All control measures which had been completed in the areas performed their duties satisfactorily."

Train Kills Youth Saving His Brother

Detective's Son Hurls Child, 11, From Path of Flyer.

Watching Freight on Curve as 'Royal Blue' Approached.

Bernard Frederick Day, jr., 17-year-old son of Precinct Detective Bernard Day of the Metropolitan Police Department, met death yesterday beneath the wheels of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad's crack flyer, "The Royal Blue," but at the moment of his dying his presence of mind saved the life of his brother, Paul, 11.

The tragedy occurred near Yost place northeast, beneath the Susquehanna Bridge.

According to John Day, 15, another brother, Bernard was watching a passing freight train on a curve and could not see the flyer approaching from the north.

"I had already crossed the tracks," John said. "I saw the 'Royal Blue' coming. I hollered 'Look out, Bernie,' but he couldn't hear me. The train couldn't stop. Bernie saved my little brother, Paul, who was standing beside him. He gave Paul a shove just as the train hit him and knocked Paul backward into the cinders."

The three sons of the detective were taking a short cut across the tracks from a new house to their present home at 1927 Yost place. Engineer of the flyer was William E. Carroll. Young Day was an apprentice printer. He recently graduated from Taft Junior High School.

New Bookings Promise Loew Best of Crop

Four Companies Produced Films to Be Shown Soon in F Street Houses.

Loew's Washington theaters will blossom forth this month with a flowery garden of the most pretentious pictures that patrons of the local cinema have seen in months, according to the announcement just made by Carter T. Barron, Loew's Eastern division manager.

Four great production companies, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Twentieth Century-Fox, United Artists and Paramount, have assured Loew's Capitol, Palace and Columbia theaters an array of pictures that seem to take top rank.

From M-G-M comes the first popular-priced engagement of "Romeo and Juliet," starring Norma Shearer, Leslie Howard, John Barrymore, Edna May Oliver and scores of others.

Close behind this will be Robert Montgomery, in an entirely new type of starring role, in "Night Must Fall," which critics from one end of the country to the other declare is "tops." Rosalind Russell in the feminine lead.

One of the year's most talked about pictures, and one that is setting new box-office records at the Music Hall in New York, is "A Star Is Born," starring Janet Gaynor and Frederick March. This new and first modern picture in Technicolor will be seen at the Palace within a fortnight.

On top of this, United Artists is releasing "Woman Chases Man," starring Miriam Hopkins and Joel McCrea with Charles Winninger, Ella Logan and many others. This picture is rated as a worthy successor to "It Happened One Night" and opens at Loew's Capitol next Friday.

After a year's absence from the screen, the Marx Brothers will return in their screamingly hilarious picture, "A Day at the Races," in which Alan Jones will be heard singing again, with Maureen O'Sullivan playing the love interest.

Stanwyck and Taylor.

Twentieth Century-Fox will offer to local movie fans "Cafe Metropole," with Loretta Young, Tyrone Powers and Adolphe Menjou, and Barbara Stanwyck and Robert Taylor in "This Is My Affair." Both of these are due for early release.

Marlene Dietrich will soon be back on Loew's screen with "Knight Without Armor," in which Robert Donat, famous on both American and European screens, will be seen opposite her.

Reverting to M-G-M, Mr. Barron states that this company also will deliver soon William Powell and Luise Rainer in "The Emperor's Candlesticks;" Clark Gable and Myrna Loy in "Parnell," and "Pick a Star," starring the new screen notable, Jack Helay, best of the lot in "Wake Up and Live."

Gayety

"GIRLS FROM TOYLAND," an independent Burlesque Association attraction in 2 acts and 24 scenes, starring Evelyn Myers, supported by Charles "Peanuts" Bohn, Kinza Vinton, Dorothy Ahearn, Joan Manns, Billy Arlington, Jean Rose, Jack Ryon, Bob Bates, the LaMar Brothers and Al and Archie. Dance numbers produced by Paul Kane. Staged by James J. Lake. Reviewed Sunday matinee by Larry Roberts.

Although the regular burlesque season has just about run its course, Col. Jimmy Lake continues to offer his Gayety Theater patrons first-class entertainment. And this goes double for the quality of female headliners he's been bringing here the last several weeks.

As a good example of what we mean, gorgeous Evelyn Myers, who has recently completed a 31-week engagement at the Apollo Theater in New York, is the lady of honor in the current revue. Miss Myers is one of the loveliest young women we have had the pleasure of seeing work in this house. She is a real platinum blonde with loads of charm and personality which make an instant hit with her audience. Evelyn also possesses a combination of dance talents that hits a real high in feminine entertainment, while her specialities and wardrobe show marked taste and lavishness.

Charles "Peanuts" Bohn, a real comedy favorite here, has never been seen to better advantage. His line of patter is both funny and clean and all of his skits carry a real punch. Bob Bates, straight man, is a clean-cut young fellow who proves an adequate foil for the many comic antics Bohn puts over.

Billy Arlington, who is better remembered by his work on the Old Columbia Wheel, is another comedian who never fails to please. Billy still works in the same style and manner which has made him one of the most popular figures in the business, which is another way of saying that he furnishes more

Trans-Lux

The world parades before you this week at the Trans-Lux with such kaleidoscopic brilliance that this reviewer was left in a state of indecision: whether to become a page in the Senate or go to Tennessee and get a young wife.

Highlights on this outstanding Trans-Lux program is the March of Time, with some of the best possible shots of the Supreme Court and a telescoped account of the political battle for new justices. For verbal and pictorial clarity the news screen has had nothing to match this presentation.

The British share the world spotlight, with Time's close-up of the Army program and the newsreels focused on the royal family and the coming coronation. Gen. Pershing is seen on his way to the London big show, as Homer Peel goes to jail for marrying a girl 13.

But spring has her innings—trout fishing, golf, summer clothes, Ladies' Day at Griffith Park, the A. A. U. walking race and the nags fighting mud at Jamaica, N. Y.

A Paramount short presents Mark Warnow with a brief case of "Blue Velvet" tunes that tickle your dancing toes, while one of the most unusual industrial subjects offers remarkable and even dazzling shots of steel workers in the Carnegie-Illinois mills.

Meany, Miny and Moe, the cut-up monks, caper through a cartoon comedy, but the laugh honors of the current bill go to the two pages who baffle Senator Reynolds of North Carolina by their political arguments on the court issue.

The Trans-Lux special—dealing with the Washington scene—has an authentic warm weather touch, kite flying, with the added excitement of floods and high water.

An excellently balanced bill.

Calvert Theater, Sixteenth on the Warner Circuit, Opens at 2324 Wisconsin Avenue Thursday Night

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen Will Play Important Part in Inaugural Ceremonies; Katharine Cornell Plans World Tour in Repertory; House-Cleaning Time at Roadside; Notes Come in From Here and There—Mostly There; News Notes of the Theater.

THE sixteenth theater operated by the Warner Brothers in Washington will be thrown open to the public on Thursday night of this week, May 6, at 7:15 o'clock, a full hour before the beginning of the inaugural performance, in order to afford guests and patrons an opportunity to inspect the new motion picture house prior to the projection of its pictured program. The theater is the Calvert, at 2324 Wisconsin avenue northwest.

BELL.

Arrangements for the inaugural ceremonies already have been completed, according to announcement made yesterday by John J. Payette, Zone Manager for the Warners in the Washington territory. Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen and Myron Walker, president of the Glover Park Citizens Association, will play important parts in the goings-on.

The Calvert Theater was built by the Globe Amusement Co., of Washington, of which Joseph Makover is president. It embodies all of the latest improvements to insure the maximum of comfort and entertainment for its customers—air conditioning, perfect projection, latest sound equipment, sumptuous rest rooms and all of the other essentials of the modern purveyance of cinematographic entertainment to the masses.

The new house will be under the managership of Alan Bachrach, according to recent announcement by Mr. Payette.

"Woman Chases Man" comes to the screen of Loew's Capitol Theater on Friday, but will be preceded to the National Capital by a personal representative of its producer. Tomorrow morning there will arrive in Washington Mr. and Mrs. Linton Wells, personal emissaries of Samuel Goldwyn. They will be feted at a press luncheon in the Mayflower and then will proceed to renew old acquaintanceships and make known to the world at large that Miriam Hopkins and Joel McCrea in "Woman Chases Man" have one of the prize vehicles of the year.

It is interesting to note in this regard that Mr. Wells is no stranger to this city. He is a former news service man, who covered all manner of important events for his leased wires. In 1920 he established a record by making a trip around the world in 28 days. In 1924 he made another record by jumping from Los Angeles to New York in a nonstop auto cruise in 165 hours. He also is famed as the first aerial stowaway, while serving the Associated Press, and as a member of the entourage of the Prince of Wales, now the Duke of Windsor, when he was touring this country and Canada a few years ago. Also, he has a considerable list of books to his credit.

It should be mentioned at this point that after 2,300 years "Lysistrata," being presented currently by the Washington Civic Theater at Wardman Park, still is a hilarious, if somewhat risque farce. It will be continued through Tuesday night of this week, as we understand it, and deserves to play to capacity business—which it has enjoyed up to now.

One of the inexplicable omissions of this department's review of the comedy was a total failure to mention the bacchanale with which the play ends. This is a florid and interesting adder-dum to the actual climax of the plot that serves as the medium for a splendid final tableau.

We would not go so far as to say that the dance is not a little too long, but it lends a fillip and a flourish to the piece that add much to its effectiveness.

I suggest that you see "Lysistrata" as one of the season's livelier offerings.

Speaking of local theatrical enterprises, this is house-cleaning time out at the Roadside Theater—the old red barn on the Rockville Pike, just the other side of the Georgetown Preparatory School. The place resounds these days to the sweeping of the broom and the swish of the mop. The seats, so I am told, are to be done over and an entirely new "atmosphere" communicated to the place by these early-spring renovations. The approach to "the barn" is to be dressed up, too, with whitewashed fences and whatnot to signalize the motorist's arrival at the Capital's only authentic "summer theater." The forthcoming season will open about the middle of June, under the direction of Anton Hardt.

The Potomac River excursion season was opened last Saturday night by the Steamer Potomac, which took advantage of the recession of the flood levels of the water to make its first bid for public patronage. The response was enthusiastic, hundreds being aboard the boat when it steamed out of its dock at Seventh and Water streets at 8:45 p. m.

The three-hour cruises this season give every promise of being more popular than ever before. Catchy dance music is provided for those who like to "step out" and every facility is afforded for a full evening's enjoyment on these down the river trips.

Last night on the Potomac, Charlie Barnett, the millionaire conductor, and his band, took possession of the rostrum to turn out the tunes for the dancers. Barnett is only 23 and one of a select group of four band leaders who rate in the million dollar class.

Communications Department.

We wish hereby to acknowledge friendly messages from Sam Cummins, owner of "Ecstasy," now in its tenth Washington week on the screen at the Belasco Theater, who is lolling around in Miami Beach, Fla.; Bunnie Skinner, of the "Lysistrata" cast out at Wardman Park, who finds it more fun to make them laugh than cry, and the Yates Sisters, Jerry, Carol and Lynn, who are having fun at the Lord Baltimore Hotel in Baltimore. Their kindly sentiments are greatly appreciated.

Katharine Cornell is contemplating a theatrical tour of the world about a year from now. The idea, so it is said, long has been in her mind. There are many difficulties and impediments to be overcome, but the eventual idea is to visit Australia, New Zealand, Japan, China and other countries of the Far East, India, South Africa, Egypt, Palestine, Europe, Great Britain and possibly South America and Mexico.

Such an extensive tour never has been undertaken by an important American player. Miss Cornell has it in mind to assemble a first-rate company of American and English players. If the plan goes through, her repertory probably will consist of "Romeo and Juliet" and one other Shakespearean play; George Bernard Shaw's "Saint John" and "Candida," Rudolf Besier's "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" and possibly an Ibsen drama.

Ray Henderson, the lucky so-and-so, may make a preliminary tour of the world, beginning in June, to map out plans for the later Cornell tour. Mr. Henderson, by the way, is this department's idea of the perfect "public relations counsel."

Down-by-the-River Note.

If you are wondering where all of the potential theater patrons were yesterday afternoon, you should have gone down by the bridle paths, fishing walls, bicycle tracks, golf links and sunning spots on the Potomac. That's where they were—by the thousands.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, May 2.—Idol chatter: To display romantic emotion, Marlene Dietrich holds her lips slightly parted, because she thinks she looks more kissable. No actress more nearly fits the expression "Pony chorus" than Dixie Dunbar. Fie on M. G. M. for keeping Lewis Stone hidden away for such long stretches. Whoever figured out that new Joan Crawford hair-do must be her secret enemy. Ummm, Robert Montgomery is getting a slight tummy to keep that extra half-chin company.

MONTGOMERY.

Wonder if Adrienne Ames sighs when she passes the palatial home, ex-husband Stephen Ames gave current wife Racquel Torres? Candidate for most girlish sweetness: Newcomer Jane Bryan. Irene Hervey and ex-boy friend Robert Taylor are shy in each other's presence, but Bob and Irene's husband (Allan Jones) are chums. We shall see department: Jean Arthur's husband is saying his wife no longer needs publicity.

High priced tailors have been unable to disguise Gary Cooper's "tall and gangling" look. Jean Harlow has read of her own death four times. Big-time singers like Nelson Eddy and Grace Moore hike for a hospital at first sign of a cold. The only reviews Katharine Hepburn pastes in her scrapbooks are the panning kind. At first glance, you might decide George Raft is the bodyguard, and "Killer" Gray the screen actor. May Robson reminds me of grandma baking pies in her old-fashioned kitchen.

I never see Dolores Del Rio without thinking of a little publicized chapter of her life, told to me by an intimate friend. Almost universally regarded as possessor of the colony's most beautiful body, it seems incredible that Dolores spent nearly all of her childhood in an invalid's chair, victim of infantile paralysis. By her own admission, it was due to the great faith of her mother that she was cured. For 11 years Mrs. Del Rio journeyed each day to a tiny Mexico City chapel, there to pray for her daughter's recovery.

When Dolores was 12 years of age she was taken to the church, and by a miracle that in a motion picture would bring laughter, she left her chair and walked home unaided. Since that day, Miss Del Rio has pursued a rigorous schedule, which in summer includes long hours in her swimming pool. Thus, a childhood misfortune led to her present great beauty, which in turn has spelled wealth and fame.

C. Henry Gordon tells this amusing, if unbelievable, anecdote. Recently, "Hank" worked in a "Charlie Chan" picture with Warner Oland, and, as coincidence would have it, the company worked on a boat set on which Gordon and Oland had played another Chan picture six years ago. According to Hank, a tourist who has visited the previous Chan set, had opportunity again to see the studio, and there beheld the same players, in the same makeup, on apparently the same set. "My goodness!" cried the visitor. "How long have they been working on this picture?"

Little

Helen Hayes and Robert Montgomery are the pictured costars of "Vanessa: Her Love Story," being revived this week as chief screen feature of the bill at the Little Theater.

This more or less vivid recital of the experiences of an ingenuous young woman enlists the services of a large number of supporting players of the first rank, among them Otto Kruger, May Robson, Lewis S. Stone, Henry Stephenson, Violet Kemble-Cooper, Donald Crisp, Jessie Ralph, Lionel Belmore, Lawrence Grant, Crauford Kent, Aileen Pringle and George K. Arthur.

Needless to say, with such a cast any story would be effectively interpreted before the cameras. But "Vanessa" is a good story. So there you have it all.

On the supplementary bill are "Symchromy, No. 2"—this is the "Seeing Sound" series; "Wang-Poo," a travel journey to Shanghai, and "The March of Time."

A bill designed to engage the interest of any seeker of diversified screen entertainment.

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, May 2.

FEATURE STORY: Joe Eisinger co-authored "A Point of Honor," which was presented by Luther Greene at the Fulton Theater. It ran for three performances and was one of the season's worst flops . . . The other night Eisinger was brought into the Emergency Room of St. Luke's Hospital. He had been beaten up badly by thieves in some darkened street nearby . . . The only things the thieves left in his wallet were the reviews of his last show—every one of them a panning!

* * * *

BOOK DEPT.: The newspaper files carried little information regarding Judge James F. O'Neil, who was stabbed in the back by an unknown assailant. Editors and reporters immediately consulted the official directory of the City of New York—probably the first time resort had to be made to this directory. The only information therein regarding Judge O'Neil was his address, given as "138 East Twelfth street." And even that was wrong!

* * * *

SPORTS DEPT.: John O'Hara was very much amused at Gen. Pershing's excitement over the coronation uniform. The novelist had one encounter with Pershing's eccentricities—in the train returning from the Harvard-Army's game in Boston . . . After each celebrant walked through Pershing's car, the General would arise from his seat, shut the door, and sit down. After ten such trips, O'Hara turned to Pershing and said: "General, this isn't the first time you've had trouble with a draft."

* * * *

DRAMA DEPT.: A columnist, who just has received an offer to go into vaudeville, went home and began emoting seriously in front of a mirror. He recited parts of "Hamlet," "Romeo and Juliet" and "Richard II." . . . His wife, who observed these strange but serious antics, complimented him: "Darling, you do them just like Howard." . . . "Really?" asked the pleased reporter. "Really as good as Leslie Howard?" . . . "Oh, no," she explained. "Not Leslie. Willie!"

* * * *

ADVERTISING DEPT.: In the Writer's Number of the Hollywood Reporter, in which the screen folk advertise their cinema achievements, is a full-page ad reading: "Ned Gimp, the Minstrel of Beverly Glenn. Now Available for Women's Clubs, Moose Picnics and Children's Lantern Slides Fetes. (M. W. S. O. P.)" . . . The initials denote "Member World's Second Oldest Profession." . . . And Ned Gimp's real name—is Gene Fowler.

* * * *

CRIME NEWS: There was undue excitement at the Harlem Uproar House last night when Jay Faggen thought he spotted Robert Irwin sitting alone at a ringside table . . . For 15 minutes the entire management studied the man's face, until they at last decided it wasn't Irwin after all . . . "Just imagine," the head waiter said, "what a piece of news that would have been." . . . "You're right," Faggen—who once was a press agent—replied. "Boy, what a line that would be for a columnist."

* * * *

POLITICS: At Madison Square Garden Sunday the Young Communist League will hold its annual convention. Angelo Herndon and Earl Browder, who will return from his secret trip to Europe on that day, will address the convention . . . Yesterday the Young Communists were polled with regard to their likes and dislikes. Their favorite actor is Robert Taylor—their favorite dance, the Suzi-Q!

* * * *

HEALTH DEPT.: Linda Watkins visited the 18 Club—one of Broadway's smallest cafe rooms—and squeezed through to a ringside table where she was placed with four other guests . . . Their chairs were placed close together, and it was almost impossible to move. After a half-hour, Miss Watkins suddenly pushed her chair back and stood up . . . "Where are you going, Linda?" her escort asked . . . "No place," she explained, "I'm just standing up—to take a rest!"

* * * *

MUSIC DEPT.: At the rehearsals for Kate Smith's program, Ted Collins began calling for Edward G. Robinson, who was to broadcast a tough-guy sketch entitled "The Ace Is Trump." . . . Collins called twice and finally came the response—offstage, where Robinson was seated in the center of a group of pageboys, for whose edification he was playing —a harp.

* * * *

Rialto

There is another double-feature bill on view at the Rialto Theater this week, composed of film plays that are in striking contrast.

Probably foremost should be rated "Private World," the Paramount production in which Claudette Colbert, and Charles Boyer are cast in the costellar roles. This is a story of the insane asylums, in which the "private worlds" are the peculiarly circumscribed mental viewpoints of the mental patients who are confined for the curative processes of abstruse mental therapy.

In addition to the costars, important roles are played in this picture by Joel McCrea, Joan Bennett, Helen Vinson and a long list of others whose names are impressive on any roster of Hollywood's foremost actors, including Esther Dale, Samuel Hinds, Theodore von Eltz, Guinn Williams, Irving Bacon and many more.

The story is a morbid sort of thing, but it carries its dramatic message nevertheless potently.

On the lighter side is "If I Had a Million," that other Paramount production in which so many stars take part to demonstrate what they would do with a million dollars if they ever came into possession of that sum. Among these are Richard Bennett, the donator of the benefactions that come to so many; Charles Ruggles, Mary Boland, George Raft, Gary Cooper, Jack Oakie, Charles Laughton, W. C. Fields, Roscoe Karns, Alison Skipworth, May Robson and a great many more.

The bill is completed by short-reel subjects and a new release of the news events.

Belasco.

Entering its tenth total week in Washington, "Ecstay," the screen feature of the bill at the Belasco Theater, discloses no diminution in public interest or demand for seats.

Much maligned—and this column has always thought unjustly—"Ecstasy" relates a morbid and tragic story, but one that is not essentially vicious.

Its foremost figure is Hedy Keisler, wife of a European munitions manufacturer, who is reported to have been much disturbed by his wife's willingness to pose before the cameras with no visible apparel. That seems to be the one blot upon the escutcheon of the producers of the picture.

Otherwise, it is a romantic triangle story that leads directly and convincingly to a tragic climax that offers the only solution of the tangle of lives the action of the drama has snarled.

The bill is completed by short-reel subjects and a new issue of the newsreel.

Nats Regain Batting Eyes With 5-Run Burst in 9th to Beat A's, 10-7

SPORTS — The Washington Post — SPORTS

Score Sets Year's High For Victors

Chapman, Bluege, Lewis Single; Stone, Kuhel Double in Rally.

Linke Relieves DeShong in 3d; Cohen Winds Up Job in Ninth.

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Philadelphia, Pa., May 2.—You'd have been proud of your Nats this afternoon if you happened to be among the 19,183 folks in old-fashioned Shibe Park, where the Washington athletes hauled off and staged an old-fashioned, ninth-inning rally without any warning at all.

They were seemily a doomed ball club as they marched into the ninth with Connie Mack's spry young men gayly sporting a 7-5 lead when things began to happen. It will require at least another paragraph to tell how the Nats, fired by some sudden ambition and rearing up like big-league thoroughbreds, put on a five-run crusher in that ninth and won the ball game, 10 to 7.

Connie Mack was entrusting the A's two-run lead to a young left-hander named Edgar Smith in that ninth, and Edgar began to have a horrible time of it. He walked Buddy Myer and then poor old, decrepit Ossie Bluege breathed fire and brimstone into the Nats' last-ditch uprising with a smash into leftfield for a single to put Myer on second and the tying run on first.

Chapman Lights the Fire.

Now playing the percentages, Manager Bucky Harris ordered a sacrifice bunt from Walter Millies and that fellow complied with a perfect tap toward Werber on which Myer scampered to third and Bluege raced to second. Harris now spurned a pinch-hitter for Ed Linke and in a thrice the bases were full, Smith pitching four wide ones to Linke.

Connie Mack lost patience with young Smith at that point and thumbed him out of the ball game, sending in the right-handed Herman Fink to pitch to Ben Chapman. But Smith wa: a terrific success out there on the mound compared to Fink.

Because Ben Chapman cow-tailed Fink's second pitch into rightfield, and home galloped Myer and Bluege with the tying runs. Then the Nats got downright onerous against Fink. Lewis crashed a single into rightfield, Kuhel whacked a long double into center, and Stone completed the carnage with a double off the leftfield wall that scored Kuhel with the fifth run of the ninth-inning proceedings.

Linke Needs Help.

Fat Eddie Linke, who had been something of a hero for six innings after relieving Jimmy DeShong, had to have help to get the A's in the ninth and make the game safe for Washington. In fact, the A's had the tying runs on base with two out before matters ended happily when Syd Cohen bamboozled Earl Brucker with a slow curve and disposed of him on an infield out.

All in all, it was a very inspiring exhibition by the Nats who, in that ninth, scoring as many runs as they have been able to make in any game this season and who set a new 1937 high for themselves with their ten hits. But there was nothing in those early innings that was very flattering.

The game began to get out of hand with the appearance of Brooklyn Jimmy DeShong in the box for the Nats at the outset. Two by two the A's began crossing the plate and they had a 6-0 lead at the end of the first three innings. They also had DeShong out of there.

Bob Johnson, who invaribaly hits a home run against Washington pitching, hit one today in the opening inning—an awful sock into the

Tigers Whip Chisox, 6-5; Pirates Win

Detroit Takes Lead in American as Bucs Also Advance.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, May 2.—Gerald Walker, continuing his heavy hitting, smashed a home run in the seventh inning today to give the Detroit Tigers a 6-to-5 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

Walker had a perfect day at bat, with two singles and the home run, his third this season, in three times at bat. The score was tied at 5 to 5 when he drove the ball out of Navin Field.

Vernon Kennedy started on the mound for Chicago, but was removed for a pinch hitter after allowing ten hits, and five runs in six innings. He was followed by Duncan Rigney and Thornton Lee, Rigney being the losing pitcher.

The Tigers went into first place as the result of today's victory.

17,400 See Pirates Thump Reds, 7 to 2

Cincinnati, May 2 (AP).—The Pittsburgh Pirates took first place in the National League today, defeating the luckless Cincinnati Reds, 7 to 2, as Chicago tripped the St. Louis Cardinals.

It was the Bucks' second straight win over the cellar dwellers, who suffered their eighth defeat against a lone victory for the season.

A crowd of 17,488 saw Joe Bowman distribute nine hits in his first start for the visitors, while his mates, led by little Lee Handley, battered two of four Red hurlers for 11 safeties.

Welsh Loses 1st Match In 5 Years to Local Foe

Barney Welsh, No. 1 tennis player of the District, lost his first tournament match to a local player in five years yesterday when Hugh Lynch, former Princeton tennis captain, thumped him with a 7—5, 6—3 defeat at the Ridgemoor Club.

The match was the final round of the club championships and gave Lynch possession of the Corby Cup, up for competition for the first time since 1923. Although the District champion was a bit off form, Lynch was far too steady for him, often forcing the Rockville law student into errors.

Wirephoto: Nats' New Catcher

catcher for the Indianapolis Indians of the American Association, who comes to Washington on a trade that sent Shanty Hogan and an unannounced sum of cash to the Midwest club.

Move Made To Get Hits And Speed

Sluggish Backstop Is an Easy Victim for Double Plays.

Acquisition Was 'Up' Once Before; Is 32; Hit .325 Last Year.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Philadelphia, May 2.—Big Shanty Hogan won his fight with weight, but lost his battle to stay in the big league, it was revealed today when the Washington Club announced that Hogan has been traded to the Indianapolis team in exchange for Catcher John L. Riddle.

An unannounced sum of cash was paid the Indainapolis Club in the deal in addition to the transfer of Hogan's contract, it was stated by Washington Club officials.

The man who will replace the gaint Hogan as the Nats' No. 1 catcher is a veteran minor leaguer of 32 years, who brings an imposing batting average of .325 in the American Association last year to the Washington Club.

Riddle several years ago had a brief trial with the Chicago White Sox. He will report to the Nats tomorrow in Cleveland, and Manager Bucky Harris will install him as the team's regular catcher immediately.

Disappointed by Hogan's failure to hit for the Nats, Owner Clark Griffith ordered Scout Joe Engel to rustle up the best available catching talent, and Engel has been observing Riddle's play with Indianapolis for the past week. He gave Griffith a positive report on the veteran minor leaguer.

Hogan Balks at Deal, May Not Join Minor Club

But Washington club officials heard a disturbing note after they had announced the deal—Hogan is balking at the transfer.

"I won't report to Indianapolis unless the salary they offer me is satisfactory," said Hogan. 'I won't go out there and play for marbles—or chalk. Some of these minor league salaries aren't much, you know. It may not be worth my while to stay in baseball."

Last season Riddle was something of a sensation at Indianapolis, driving in 73 runs in his 115 games and making 147 hits, of which 21 were doubles, four triples and five home runs. He had an impressive fielding average of .972.

Big Hogan, who was hailed as a tremendous asset to the Nats when he fought his successful battle with weight in the South, where he reduced from 275 pounds to 232, seemingly left his strength in the Southland.

Sluggish both behind the plate and at bat, he has made only four hits for the Nats this season and was an untenable double play victim.

Opposing infielders reveled in Hogan's presence at the plate, readily taking advantage of his slowness of foot. Shortstops abandoned their regular positions when Hogan was at bat and played almost in short left center field, confident that they could throw him out on any kind of a ground ball. On one occasion here yesterday, Shortstop Newsome, of the A's, simply backed up to rob Hogan of a line drive that was headed for left centerfield.

Riddle, a former teammate of Ben Chapman's on the Alabama sandlots, is husky as catchers go—weighing around 175 pounds and standing nearly 6 feet. His speed, in contrast to the slowness of Hogan, is attested by his eight stolen bases of last year. One hundred and one assists in 1936 speak eloquently of his throwing arm.

Gehrig Hits First Homer, Yanks Lose

52,150, Biggest Crowd of Season, Sees Red Sox Win, 5 to 4.

New York, May 2.—Before the largest crowd of the young season, 52,150, Lou Gehrig snapped out of his homer-hitting slump today, but his first round-trip clout of the campaign wasn't enough to save the Yankees from a 5-to-4 beating at the hands of the Boston Red Sox.

Errors at crucial moments by Frank Crosetti and Johnny Broaca, and a couple of timely extra-base hits by Jimmy Foxx and Rookie Bobby Doerr, put the game on ice for the Red Sox, giving Footsie Marcum the better of a pitching duel with Broaca.

Broaca's error on Foxx's easy tap in the ninth allowed Marcum to score with the winning run. In the sixth, Crosetti fumbled Pinky Higgins' bounder, and, after Fabian Gaffke singled, Doerr cashed in on the misplay by belting a two-bagger to send two runs over.

'37 Irish Varsity Beats Ex-Stars, 7-0

South Bend, Ind., May 2 (AP).—Nevin (Bunny) McCormick, right halfback, took a lateral pass from Mario Tonelli, fullback, in the fourth quarter, and ran 28 yards for a touchdown to give the 1937 Notre Dame varsity a 7-to-0 victory over a team of former Irish stars before 15,000 spectators here today.

The two elevens met in the O'Brien memorial game, closing feature of Notre Dame's spring practice season. The contest was dedicated to the late Johnny O'Brien, end coach, killed in a Chicago automobile accident last March.

The "old timers" included in their line-up Irish players from 1928 to 1935, including six former captains and all the teammates of O'Brien on the 1929 and 1930 Notre Dame teams.

Smythe Scores as 33 Sailboat Skippers Vie

His 16-Foot Comet Scores Decisive Victory Over Larger Boats in Handicap Race; Levy's Entry Wins Class A Event Off Hain's Point.

By Dan Craig.

In the first official race held this season, skippers of the Potomac River Sailing Association piloted 33 sailboats over the 5-mile course off Hains Point yesterday with the help of a fair breeze and sunny skies.

D. Verner Smythe sailed his new 16-foot comet, "Sassy Too," to a decisive victory, negotiating the course in 1:16:50 and beating the larger boats of the 20-foot open-handicap class 4 to 6 minutes, boat for boat.

The class "A" handicap was won by Frank Levy sailing his Kittiwynk, with Ted De Boer's 1936 champion Sandpiper a close second. Jack Marsh's yawl Zephyr was third.

In class "B", Bill Preston, sailing his tiny 11-foot dinghy Flighty, took first, followed by Brent Drane's Kittiwake, with Katisha, a newcomer to the fleet, skippered by Richard Shaw 3d.

H. C. Bush's Cricket II led the 20-foot open-handicap boats over the line at the start but was overtaken on the last leg at the bell buoy by Ralph Young's Myray and did not regain her position.

Judge P. E. Edrington's Lady Avon had her port stays torn loose when she tangled the Bobcat of the Corinthian Sea Scouts, as both were trying to dodge one of the numerous tugs and attendant barges that cluttered the course. But the Judge managed to take her over the line for third place.

Fourteen comets were led over the starting line by Verner Smythe's Sassy Too, painted a bright blue, with Clyde Cruit's So Big, of the fire engine paint, trailing her about two boat lengths. Sassy Too seemed to chase the breeze all over the course and was never threatened after the start. So Big was backwinded at the committee boat in pursuit, with the rest of the comet fleet. Sassy opened her lead until she was sailing up among the boats of the 20-foot open handicap class. Comets were spread all over the course. Aldrich Dudley's Breezy trailed Cruit and Smythe by about 200 yards, with Nandu, Cygnet, Litl. Escapade and Tangier bunched about 300 yards behind her. The remaining comets staged a race of their own, which included several "luffing matches" behind this group.

According to Paul Tomalin, the course is at present at least 800 yards longer than it was last year, as the bell buoy off Hains Point has been moved 200 yards downstream due to dredging by the Army Engineer Corps.

Dixie Pigs Defeat Rose Liquor, Anacostia Loses.

Jewelers, New Deal, Star Radio Win in 'B' Class.

Perfect baseball weather marked the opening of the National City League yesterday as the 16 teams commenced the season in various parts of the city. Several thousand fans watched two games played on the Ellipse.

The Heurich Brewers, National City Section "A" champions, set a hot pace by swamping the Mount Rainier Grays, a new entry in the circuit, 15 to 4, on the Mount Rainier diamond. Keeping pace with the Brewers were the Union Printers, who nosed out Shady Grove, 1 to 0, in 12 innings on the Ellipse, and Gordon's Cafeteria, which took a 6-3 decision from Anacostia Motors.

In Section "B," the Ross Jewelers put the 260th Coast Artillery to rout, 12 to 3, in West Potomac Park; Star Radio eked out an 11-10 win over Reed's Pharmacy, also in West Potomac, and Georgetown A. C. trounced Leary Motors, 13-5.

Surprise game of the day was the Union Printers' victory, which found both teams displaying mid-season form as George Mosedale, of the Printers, and Frank Baroni waged a bitter mound battle. Shady Grove gathered but four hits off Mosedale. Baroni yielded a dozen but was effective in the pinches.

The Printers took the game in the twelfth when Ben Schneider, centerfielder, singled, stole second and scored on a single by Phil Boundford, former Western All-High star, to centerfield.

U. S. Netmen Complete Rout Of Japanese

Australia Cup Team Polishes Off Mexico, Swiss Win.

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, May 2.—Frankie Parker, of Milwaukee, won his second singles match of the Davis Cup series between the United States and Japan when he defeated Fumiteru Nakano, 6—0, 6—3, 6—2, today.

The outcome had no bearing on the actual zone elimination as the American squad clinched the right to meet Australia in the North American zone finals yesterday with a doubles victory.

Parker's chop-strokes and steadier play proved too much for Nakano, although the latter twice won on the service in the second set to make it a more evenly matched affair.

Parker broke through Nakano's service three times in the open set, four times in the second and twice more in the last.

Mexico City, May 2 (U.P.).—Australia's most powerful Davis Cup tennis in more than a decade today won the final two singles matches against Mexico to sweep the series, 5-0.

In the other match, Adrian Quist stopped Mexico's No. 1 player, Dr. Ricardo Tapia, 6—2, 6—4, 4—6, 6—3.

George Armstrong, member of the National Public links committee from Buffalo, N. Y., and prominently mentioned as successor to Chairman R. Arthur Wood, is in town and plans to play a number of the public and private courses.

East Potomac's golf team defeated the invading Glenwood linksmen from Richmond, Va., 29½ to 6½, over the downtown public links course. Mel Shorey, local pro, carded a 71 for the best score of the day. Gus Kupa turned in a 72 and Ahearn and Sweatte followed with a 75 and 77 to pace the local team.

Joe Straiges Is Terranova Foe Tonight

New York Lightweight Lost 11 Bouts in 24 Starts; Kayoed Once.

Archibald, Lou Ambers' Stablemate, in Eight-Round Semifinal.

By Bill McCormick.

Frankie Terranova, a seasoned lightweight campaigner from New York, will make his bow at Turner's Arena tonight against Joey Straiges, a local favorite, in a ten-round featured bout.

Straiges, who has shown to great advantage in Washington, has been defeated only once. That single defeat took place here at the hands of Eddie Dunne, Benny Leonard's protege.

No record is available on Terranova prior to 1936, but last year he broke about even in some 24 fights. In this double dozen of fisticuff encounters, Frankie was defeated ten times by decisions, knocked out once, won nine decisions and put four of his opponents on the floor for the full count.

Terranova was outpointed by Billy Beauhold, Mickey Greb, Paris Apice, Pinkey Morris, Al Reid (twice), Georgie Holmes, Baby Casanova, Joey Zoda and Dominick Barrone. He was knocked out in one round by Norman Snow.

Arcel With Straiges.

Frankie won by decision from Patsy Sylvestri, Jack Townsend, Eddie Wiley, Johnny Cabello, Julie Katz, Midget Doyle, Connie Holmes, Georgie Holmes and Johnny Alba.

He knocked out Billy Bush, Henry Porter, Jimmy Falco and Joey Tagg.

This year Frankie has done very well, winning a decision from Al Reid and knocking out Lew Feldman in six rounds.

Ray Arcel, the noted trainer who worked with Johnny Pena when he upset Lou Gevinson, and has helped build Eddie Dunne into the fighter he is, will second Straiges. Straiges' regular handlers decided if Arcel could help Dunne beat their fighter, he could help Eddie, so they have employed him.

An eight-dound semifinal will offer the first load of bantamweights seen at the arena for some time. Joey Archibald, stablemate of Lightweight Champion Lou Ambers, will do battle with Buddy Grimes, a Norfolk buzz saw, with the winner promised a possible chance to swap swats with Champion Sixto Escobar or some other good bantamweight when the outdoor season gets under way.

Two Six Rounders.

Two six-round preliminaries will complete the bill.

Doug Swetnam, a good local featherweight, will take on Frankie DeAngelo, who once was the best 125 pounder in the District. DeAngelo has been doing very nicely in his comeback attempt, but Swetnam is expected to offer him tougher opposition than have his other recent opponents.

The remaining preliminary will find Bob Anderson, the Leonardtown (Md.) lightweight, making passes at Washington's Bill Temes. In a previous bout, Temes won the decision.

A four-round bout between Red Drake, of Charlotte, and Battling Zazo, of Ozark Hill, N. C., colored middleweights, will be held in reserve.

Post Predictions.

Bouts are rated from A (the tops) to G (the lows).

Main event—Joey Straiges, Camden, N. J., vs. Frankie Terranova, New York, lightweights; 10 rounds. Rated C. Straiges should have little trouble with the New York club fighter. Terranova's boring-in tactics might bother a less cool fighter, but not Joey.

Semifinal—Joey Archibald, Providence, R. I., vs. Buddy Grimes, Norfolk; bantamweights; 8 rounds. Rated C. Archibald has too much class for the Norfolk fighter and should win handily.

Preliminaries—Doug Swetnam, Washington, vs. Frankie DeAngelo, Washington, featherweights; 6 rounds. Rated C. Frankie is finding his old form. Doug should give him a good fight, but probably will weaken in the stretch.

Bob Anderson, Leonardtown, Md., vs. Bill Temes, Washington, lightweights; 6 rounds. Rated C. Anderson dropped a close one last time, but should reverse the decision this time.

A. & W. Nine Wins.

The A. & W. Hot Shoppe nine defeated the Firestone A. C. yesterday, 7 to 3, behind the effective pitching of Smith. Lorenz twirled for the losers.

Dodgers Help, Mungo Downs Phillies, 5 to 1

By the Associated Press.

Brooklyn, May 2.—The Dodgers finally got around to giving Van Lingle Mungo some support today and cashed in on the fireball right-hander's three-hit pitching for a 5-to-1 victory over the Phillies.

For seven innings Claude Passeau and Mungo hooked up in a tight pitching duel. In the eighth, however, the Dodgers found the range and collected all of their runs in one big spree.

Boston, May 2.—Cliff Melton, Giants' 6-foot 4-inch southpaw from Baltimore, left-handed the Bees to death today to win his first National League contest, 3 to 1, before 23,767 paid fans.

A cold, high wind failed to bother Melton, who whiffed nine batters and allowed but four hits. Guy Bush, who defeated young Melton last week in New York by a similar score, went the distance for the Bees and pitched well, despite 13 Giant hits.

Matey Gets Preakness Test at Pimlico Today

Man o' War Colt Meets Six Rivals

Four Dixie Candidates Race; Finance Hope of Denemark Stable.

By Walter Haight.

Monday, generally given over to a featureless program at the Maryland tracks, promises to provide interesting racing today at ancient Pimlico. The Maryland Jockey Club has arranged a card that would have been a Saturday show at the Bowie. The feature is the Brooklandwood Handicap, long on name and short on purse, being a $1,200 race, but it has drawn a good caliber of horse flesh. Seven have been named for the test of 1 1-16 miles.

Chief interest centers around Walter M. Jeffords' Matey. This son of Man o' War is the colt that won the Pimlico Futurity last fall after the disqualification of Priviledged. Matey is an eligible for the Preakness.

Much has been written and a lot more said about Matey's poor effort at Havre de Grace. He turned up oodles and oodles of money on that occasion. It was his first outing of the year and in the mud. He had Jockey Harry Richards, the ace money jockey, in his saddle. However, Richards was accused of riding a dull race and it was evident that Matey was running a dull race.

Unless there is a decided change in the weather, Matey would have the excuse of an off track. He will be opposed by a small field and he will have Richards to ride him. Furthermore, whether or not they bet on him, Matey will be watched as few horses have been watched.

The Burch-trained colt has good opposition. The Denemark entry of Finance and Two Bob, with emphasis on the former, is formidable. Purple Knight won with ease at Havre de Grace. Bootless demonstrated last out that he has regained stake form. Keivex and Azucar, the likely long shots of the field, may awake.

Four of these horses, Finance, Two Bob, Bootless and Azucar, are eligibles of the Dixie Handicap, the $10,000 added feature scheduled Saturday and the outstanding event of the week at Pimlico.

Other likely starters in the Dixie are Dark Hope, one that worked out well between races on Saturday; Aneroid, winner of the Baltimore Spring Handicap in conivncing manner; Weston, recent sprint winner and Memory Book, Greentree Stable campaigner.

The Dixie is over the mile and three-sixteenth course.

Turf Notes—Jockeys Charlie Kurtsinger and Harry Richards, who went to New York to ride in the Wood Memorial, will be in action here today . . . they leave Friday for Louisville, where they will ride War Admiral and Pompoon, respectively, in the Derby . . . Jockey Maurice Peters left after Saturday's program for Kentucky . . . he rides the Foxcatcher Farm's airy Hill in tomorrow's Derby trial . . . Mrs. Emil Denemark will not sign Frank Gilpin as trainer . . . Gilpin is a Canadian, and immigration officials have refused to allow him to train an American-owned stable in this country, it is reported . . . Jockey Leo Fallon will ride in New York today, returning tomorrow . . . Churchill Downs will follow Charles Town's lead and conduct the daliy double on the second and third races . . . thus giving the late comers a chance at the twin wager . . . Saturday's $1,693 "double" might have been good advertising for Pimlico, but it had an effect on the betting . . . there was $25,000 in the pool and most of that money went out of action with the payoff . . . Dillie Saunders, who rode Omaha to victory in the Kentucky Derby, will ride Finance in the Dixie Saturday . . . Wickliffe Boy, one that ran a poor last the other day, has been shipped to the farm for a rest . . . Edward J. Brennan has been named racing secretary for the Bel Air track, which opens a meeting on July 27 . . . Charles Town stalls may be obtained by writing Charles Town Jockey Club, Box 230, Charles Town, W. Va. . . . Hagerstown is trying to interest the B & O. Railroad in running race specials from Washington to its races beginning May 18.

Roy Johnson (No. 22) hit the dirt as he slid into third base yesterday in the second inning of the Yankee-Boston Redsox game in New York. With Bill Bennings

Selections at Pimlico.

Dear Al:

It is said that there is a spot in the Pacific Ocean that is 10 miles deep. Well, I'm feeling as low as that and then some. I've seen days and days but Saturday the Bennings selections were lower than a tired whale's abdomen. It seemed as though Pimlico had gone in for races between horses and pigs and I picked all the pigs. When I left the track I didn't go out the usual way because I would have had to pass the dead horse wagon and somebody might have pushed me in. Clocker Mike accused me of having picked the horse, Quiet Please, in the feature race. Quiet Please was destroyed last week, but I looked at the selctions to see if he was right. I ran out of the press box. On the way down the steps he yelled back, "A race horse handicapper ain't nothing but a newspaperman with his brains knocked out." I got some odorous rides, too. One of the jockeys on my horse came out in a lavendar blouse. He rode like "Little Old Lady." It might have been time for tea, but not for going any place in particular with that horse under him. "Why do they let a boy like that ride?" I demanded. From the other end of the press box came, "Well, Bill, they had to let him ride. His mother bought him a ticket on this merry-go-round." I've a good mind to start picking a "Horses That Won't Win" column and perhaps I can get a winner.

BILL.

First Race—Slow Motion raced a fair race in that first outing. May benefit by the education to lead these home. Acute was a tip as a first-time starter. Ran a dull race then, but has worked well. Stage Hit is said to be a speedy one.

Second Race—Greek Idol, a fair sort on the flat, made a fair showing over the fences here last week. He made one poor landing. I expect improvement and a set of brackets. Gallyvogne is from the good Hitchcock stable. Rockden and Teddy The Bold have some chance.

Third Race—Manda's Baby showed good speed last out and may be the best of the cheap gang gathered for this sprint. Swift Flash has some fair races and is likely to be prominent. White Sweets had much speed on the small tracks last year.

Fourth Race—Suntime was caught in a tangle soon after the break in that recent outing and ran a good race when clear. Needs only good racing luck. Bojangles raced greenly first out and should improve. Bentaur is a fair sort and is dangerous.

Fifth Race—I'm going to take Alexandrine in this field. Perhaps I'm wrong, but I expect Defiate and Dashing Doe to run each other into the ground. If they do, Alexandrine will be the come-from-behind horse.

Sixth Race—Matey must be taken in this field. The Preakness candidate can't be as bad as that first race of the year at The Graw. He has worked well and is in light. Finance and Bootless are as good as those recent good efforts.

Seventh Race—Cruising was knocked about in that last, but is fit as a fiddle. May take the measure of Aroused. Timber Lady has worked well and has plenty of foot. May be the surprise of the tiny field.

Eighth Race—Abbot's Last was poorly handled last out. A change of riders should help. Rollick is well placed here and is the one to beat. The Swagman showed signs of returning to form last week. Dangerous with the right handling.

Best bet—Suntime.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Woltz, of Salem, Va., and Harry Clemons, librarian at the university since 1927, today hold the Raven Society award for excellence in service and contributions to university student life. Although scholarship is a necessary qualification, it cannot stand alone.

Burger was president of the medical school in 1936-1937, and the following year was elected to Phi Beta Kappa. He was a member of the football squad, and in his fourth year was named as All-Southern tackle. Woltz was business manager of Corks and Curls, and editor-in-chief of the Virginia Law Review. He has been president of the Raven Society, vice president of the Jefferson Society and president of the University Press Club.

The library collection at the university, under Clemons, has doubled. Some of Clemons' significant honors and activities have been the Scribner Fellow at Princeton, Jacobus Fellow of Princeton and Oxford, Virginia Academy of Science and Phi Beta Kappa.

The newly elected members of the Raven Society are Richard P. Bell, jr., of Staunton; James B. Black, jr., of Red Springs, N. C.; DuPont Gerry, of Greenville, S. C.; J. Grant Hebble, 3d, of Newport News; John B. MacGregor, of Afton; Charles T. Nicholson, of Alexandria; William Larkin Williams, of Washington, D. C.; Llewellyn C. Thomas, of Puerto Alegre, Brazil; F. The name of C. Ray Jones, Secretary of State and a member of the Garrett County Bar, also has been mentioned.

1 Drowns, 3 Saved In Canoe Accident

Meadville, Pa., May 2 (AP).—A canoe upset a mile out on Lake Pymatuning today and Mrs. Lyle Redfoot, 22, was drowned.

Her husband, Miss Louise Martin, 22, and Donald Thompson, 26, clung for 30 minutes to the upturned craft, then Redfoot, 27, volunteered to swim for aid.

A motorist noticed the plight of the trio and drove to a nearby CCC camp with a call for aid.

Lieut. William Taube pulled the exhausted Redfoot from the lake, and boats brought in the other two. Coroner Luther J. King, who returned a verdict of accidental death, said waves upset the canoe. All four lived at Freedonia.

"The information we have indicates Burkard went berserk," he said.

Burkard was questioned by a recent grand jury concerning evidence that his bank deposits had exceeded his salary. Burkard, accused of perjury during his testimony, was out on bail pending trial.

Advice Offered On Fence Making

A white picket fence adds greatly to the appearance and sense of privacy of the small house. It is simple to build. If the owner cannot afford to have the carpenter erect it, he can purchase the pickets and rails and posts, and even the gate, at the mill and do the work himself.

Cedar or locust or some other wood that will withstand the soil action used as posts; a top rail of 2-by-4-inch dressed lumber and a bottom rail of the same, nailed to the posts; pickets nailed to those, and there is the fence.

To assure even spacing of the pickets, take a piece of wood—one of the pickets, if they are not too wide will do nicely—hold it against the first picket erected, and then set the next one against it. Nail the second picket and remove the stick and repeat the process. In this way the pickets will be evenly spaced.

Steel Industry Notes Decline In Production

Capacity Rate Drops to 91% as Result of Recent Flood.

Cleveland, Ohio, May 2.—Various developments have brought a better condition in the steel market, following announcement of price policy for third quarter. Buyers have accepted this as assurance that they can proceed with certainty and need not press mills for position on rolling schedules, says Steel.

Steelmakers, in general, have sufficient tonnage on books to keep production at the present high rate for many weeks, in some instances well into fourth quarter.

April pig iron production totaled 3,404,060 gross tons, compared with 3,470,470 in March, a loss of 66,410 tons, because of the shorter month. For four months total production is 13,114,277 tons, compared with 8,323,831 tons in the same period of 1936, a gain of 4,790,446 tons, or 57 per cent.

Brief interruption of production at Pittsburgh and Wheeling by flood, which passed in a few hours, has brought the national operating rate down half a point to 91 per cent of capacity. Pittsburgh operations declined 5 points to 90 and Wheeling 8 points to 88 per cent. New England also dropped 7 points, to 93 per cent. Cleveland at 79½ per cent, and Buffalo at 93 per cent showed no change. Gains were made at all other points. Chicago added 1 point, to 85½ per cent. Eastern Pennsylvania 11 points, to 70½. Youngstown 1 point, to 87, Birmingham 3 points, to 83, Detroit 5 points, to 100, Cincinnati 4 points, to 90 and St. Louis 12 points, to 94 per cent.

Scrap presents the only soft spot, prices continuing to decline in the face of restricted mill buying and large offerings brought out by unusually high prices. Recession of prices has brought the market for steel making grades to about the same level as prevailed at the end of February.

Production of automobiles is close to record levels for all time. Last week production was 139,475 units, compared with 140,822 in the all-time high week in 1929. General Motors turned out 55,455, Ford 35,875 and Chrysler 31,000. April output was 558,320, the highest month since June, 1929. For the first four months of 1937 total cars were 1,860,000, compared with 1,644,898 in the corresponding period of 1936.

Further declines in scrap has brought the composite for that commodity to $19.60, a loss of 82 cents from last week. The same influence caused the iron and steel composite to decline 11 cents to $40.25. The finished steel composite is unchanged at $61.70.

Am. Cynamid Nets 54 Cents on Common

New York, May 2 (AP).—American Cyanamid Co. and subsidiaries in a report for the March quarter showed net income of $1,364,640, equal to 54 cents a share on common stock, compared with $738,015, or 29 cents a share in March quarter last year.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively,
A Special Correspondent.

Uncertainty in Market Status Halts Speculators; Business Holds Good.

New York, May 2.—Last week appeared to bring to a climax the weakness and uncertainty in stock and commodity markets that have kept opinion unsettled over the past two months or more. Stocks ran into two heavy days of selling, on Monday and again on Wednesday, and although a recovery was in progress at the close of the week, the setback brought the loss score for April to around 10 per cent, the first important decline in just a year.

In commodities also the shakeout of weakly held speculative positions was considerable, and prices in a number of markets were brought down to levels that suggest less buying ahead by consumers but more actual use.

While speculation in stocks by Americans, and in commodities also, has been considerable over the past year, as strong inflationary currents began to run, the business on this side has been tame compared with that indulged in abroad. Particularly in London the spree in commodities and gold shares reached great lengths, and it required only unfavorable rumors, as for example a possible cut in the dollar gold price, to set off enough selling to disclose a top-heavy structure. The fall in London was heavy, and it brought a repercussion of selling here for foreign account and failure of at least two market firms, one in London and one in Paris.

Official Approval.

Markets probably are all the stronger, here and abroad, for the return to closer touch with realities. Incidentally, the jolt of funds out of speculative markets probably has not been wholly distasteful to the authorities. On the contrary, President Roosevelt's attacks on prices and speculation were blamed for the fall. A halt has come to the influx of foreign money into our markets, and the return home of British funds, for instance, may have worked to help the Treasury in its new borrowing operations.

For all that the first offering of the British £100,000,000 loan was a failure, in that much of it had to be taken up by the government itself. While that was going on the fall in the franc compelled the French government to postpone some of its inflationary program and forced the Federal Reserve banks to come to the support of Government bonds here to the tune of $40,000,000, as selling increased on the eve of the higher reserve requirements.

If any lesson is to be learned from the recent developments it must be that deficit financing by governments becomes more dangerous the longer it continues, that taxation is unpopular, and that once business expansion and commodity price advances begin it is difficult to stop them, and dangerous. Aside from politics, the position of speculative markets here has been improved.

First quarter earnings of industrial and railroad companies are reported at large gains over a year ago, and the second quarter outlook is for still further gains. Whatever may have been said of recent prices, current levels do not look unduly high on an earnings basis. The worry comes less from the actual position than from what may be in store. The stock market has for so long enjoyed the reputation as a forecaster that the suspicion has been aroused of a slump in business ahead.

Not Yet Through.

It would be only natural for some letdown to take place this summer It usually does, and the spring pace has been fast. Moreover, the fall in commodity prices has lessened the scramble of manufacturers and others for goods for inventory purposes, but that fact will tend to increase activity later.

On the whole it does not seem reasonable to suppose that the long bull market in securities and the recovery in business have reached a turning point. If for no other reason, the end is unlikely until we have had much more of an inflationary boom, but a period of irregular movements and lessened activity is generally expected for the stock market.

Rubber Consumption 24% Over Year Ago

Boston, Mass., May 2.—The total amount of crude rubber consumed by our manufacturers in March was 24 per cent greater than that used in March a year ago, while in the first three months of this year consumption exceeded by 19 per cent that in the first quarter of 1936. Domestic stocks on hand are now running about 30 per cent less than a year ago. Three-quarters of all the crude rubber used in this country goes into automobiles.

Lumber Shipments Decline for Week

The lumber industry during the week ended April 24 stood at 74 per cent of the 1929 weekly average of production and 77 per cent of 1929 shipments. Reported new orders gained, but were slightly below the weekly average of March.

Reported production was heaviest of any 1937 week to date. Shipments were somewhat less than those reported for the preceding week, which was the record week of the year to date.

National production reported for the week ended April 24 by 6 per cent fewer mills was about the same as the output of the preceding week; shipments were 5 per cent below shipments of that week; new orders were 3 per cent above that week's orders, according to reports to the National Lumber Manufacturers Association.

Railroad Earnings 166% Over 1935

Chicago, May 2 (AP).—Net operating income for 1936 of the Chicago and Eastern Illinois Railway Co. was $1,658,301, an increase of $1,035,547 or 166 per cent over the 1935 total of $622,753, Charles M. Thomson, trustee, reported today to stockholders in the road's fifteenth annual statement.

The report said continued improvement in business conditions had resulted in heavier freight and passenger traffic with a corresponding upturn in revenues. The report did not, however, break down the net earnings into an equivalent for each common share of stock outstanding.

The railway has been in the process of a reorganization for several months.

Short Sightedness.

Correct defense may at times be nothing more than the ability to choose the lesser of two evils. East, in the hand shown below, guarded against the loss of one trick and by so doing conceded two tricks and a game contract.

West decided that on the bidding neither his own suit nor partner's would make a propitious lead and, therefore, tried the "surprise attack" of the fourth-best club. Dummy ducked and declarer permitted East's Jack to hold. A club continuation was won by the King, and the seven of spades followed. East jumped to the conclusion that declarer, probably holding the Ace and ten, was trying to "sneak past" a trick and to prevent this, split his honors, playing the Queen. In so doing he had played directly into declarer's hand. The Ace won the trick, and the ten established two more spade tricks in dummy. East, after winning the spade King, could not guess that his side had two potential diamond tricks and, therefore, continued with clubs, declarer winning. Heart leads by declarer then established three heart tricks before the diamond Ace was driven out and, thus, the contract was fulfilled.

East's defense in the spade suit had been very short-sighted. The danger of declarer-winning the first spade lead from dummy with the ten was not so great as the practical assurance that splitting the honors would result in establishment of dummy's suit for three tricks.

Official Denies Union Activity In Mine Killing

Harlan County Attorney Reports Clouse Slain in Private Quarrel.

By the Associated Press.

Pineville, Ky., May 2.—Lloyd Clouse was slain by Bill Lewis in Verdan, Harlan County, after he had shot Lewis three times, Bert Howard, Harlan County attorney, declared here today in reporting to Circuit Judge James M. Gilbert the result of his investigation of the slaying.

A Pineville attorney, representing the United Mine Workers of America, and "union officials" were quoted in telegrams to the La Follette committee in Washington as saying Clouse was slain by "four mine guards" because of union activities.

The Harlan County attorney characterized these reports as false. He said he had made a careful investigation of the case and had found that the union or nonunion angle "has nothing whatsoever" to do with the slaying. "Clouse had been drinking and made threats against Lewis in the camp at Verda," Howard said.

"Clouse was known as a bad man with a criminal record in Clay County," he continued. "He met Lewis in the camp and opened fire immediately and without warning. He shot Lewis in the leg and two bullets glanced off his body. Lewis then drew his pistol and fired once. The bullet hit Clouse in the temple, killing him instantly.

"Clouse's brother was not beaten up, as some one falsely advised the committee, and Clouse was not shot until he had fired at Lewis three times. If the committee really wants facts there they are."

Union Continues Drive.

Harlan, Ky., May 2 (AP).—Organizers for the United Mine Workers of America, led by their district president, William Turnblazer, of Jellico, Tenn., continued their drive to unionize the Harlan County coal field at four mass meetings today.

A score of Kentucky State patrolmen, sent by Gov. A. B. Chandler at the request of Turnblazer, acted as observers at the meetings, all of which were quiet.

Turnblazer estimated the crowd attending the meeting held in a field near Verda at 2,000 to 3,000. Capt. Ed Blue, in charge of State patrolmen assigned to the gathering, estimated the crowd at 400.

George Titler, Chattanooga, Tenn., international U. M. W. A. representative, said the union now has 5,000 members in the county. At last week's meeting, he announced the U. M. W. A. had enrolled 1,000. By next week, he said, union officials expect the membership to total 10,000 in this heretofore nonunion area.

Turnblazer told the miners he had come to Harlan County at the suggestion of President Roosevelt, who is now on a fishing trip in the Gulf of Mexico.

He said the President told him:

"If you haven't got anything to do this week-end, why don't you run down to Harlan County and speak to the miners?"

Manslaughter Fought At Trial of Denhardt

New Castle, Ky., May 2 (AP).—Attorneys for Brig. Gen. Henry H. Denhardt said today they would fight any move by the Commonwealth to have Circuit Judge Charles C. Marshall include manslaughter in his charge to the jury tomorrow.

Late yesterday Commonwealth's Attorney H. B. Kinsolving, jr., asked the judge to include manslaughter. Only the judge's charge and closing arguments remain before the jury will retire to decide the fate of the man the Commonwealth says killed pretty Verna Garr Taylor.

Hospital Inmate Hangs Himself With Bedsheet

Olsen, Officer in Navy's Medical Corps, Leaves Despondent Note.

Roger H. Olsen, lieutenant in the Medical Corps of the United States Navy, an inmate of St. Elizabeths Hospital, hanged himself with a bed sheet in his room in the hospital early yesterday.

His body, suspended from a noose attached to a dresser, was found by Earl M. Shurtleff, an attendant. A hospital physician pronounced Olsen dead. Deputy Coroner Christopher Murphy issued a certificate of suicide.

A note address to Olsen's wife was was found in the room. In it he expressed sorrow for his act, adding, "I will be better out of the way."

Olsen was admitted to the hospital three months ago, according to Dr. Murphy. He is survived by his wife and a 3-year-old daughter.

Olsen is listed in the Navy Department register as a native of Illinois. He was born May 31, 1906.

Girl, 3, May Survive Tumble From Bridge

Pasadena, Calif., May 2 (AP).—Although she was thrown 100 feet from the Colorado Street Bridge by her mother yesterday, 3-year-old Jeannette Ward probably will recover from her injuries, physicians said tonight.

The mother, Mrs. Myrtle Ward, 22, was fatally injured as she leaped from the bridge. Police said they learned from her husband, Clarence Ward, WPA worker, that she was despondent because of financial worries. The child's fall was broken by branches of a tree under the span.

Trolley Rider Loses His Cash To Pickpocket

Two Robbed in Hotel; Thieves' Loot Reaches $1,200 Total.

Pickpockets and sneak thieves gathered in loot amounting to more than $1,200 yesterday in forays on street cars, hotels and rooming houses.

The best "haul" was made by a colored woman who picked the pocket of Otto Miller, of the Soldiers Home, of $450 on a Seventh street car. Miller told police he was jostled by the woman when he boarded the car at P street.

Jewelery and clothing, valued at $477.85, was stolen from their rooms in a downtown hotel, Lillian Duncan and Rella Hart, both of Dallas, Tex., reported to police. The robber, they said, ransacked their adjoining rooms. Miss Duncan said a diamond ring worth $225 was cut from her finger.

A diamond ring, valued at $350, was stolen from her apartment at 1134 Twelfth street northwest, Peggy Johnson told police.

Frank Dyer, 1706 Nineteenth street northwest, lost $90 when his apartment was robbed.

Three $20 bills were stolen from a pocketbook in his apartment, Russell Miller, 1820 California street northwest, told police. The place was entered from a fire-escape door, which was unlocked.

Two men were being held at the First Precinct Station last night after they were captured on F street after a jewelry store window had been broken. Howard Phillips, 1358 Ingraham street northwest, manager of Castleberg's Jewerly Co., said a quantity of watches was taken from the store window after a rock had been hurled through it.

Girls Speeded Into Siberia to Marry Pioneers

Soviet, Building Up Far East, Heeds Appeal for Helpmates.

By the United Press.

Moscow, May 2.—The Soviet Union tonight accelerated one of the greatest "lonely hearts" migrations in history as thousands of girls and young women embarked for Russia's bleak eastern regions to become the wives of miners, soldiers and pioneers.

Just as hardy pioneers of the United States struck out for the Far West, conquered the frontiers and sent back East for wives, the Russian pathfinders are demanding that women be sent to them.

But the Russians are developing the Far East faster than the United States settled the Far West, necessitating wholesale shipments of girls and young women.

New Towns Spring Up.

Scores of new towns and villages and what is claimed to be an impregnable defense against pillaging tribes have been erected in once-desolate Siberia. Roads, factories and farms have sprung up.

The urgent appeal for wives was met by girls of the Young Communist League, who applied by the thousands to be sent to the Far East to marry, and work with their husbands.

The movement started here at a meeting of "Red army wives," at which Valentina Hetagurova, 22-year-old holder of the coveted order of the Red banner, told of the need for "strong and willing wives" on the frontiers.

She warned from experience that life would be "difficult, but interesting and exciting."

"Girls in the Far East," she added, "introduce into the grim and roughened life something that makes men more noble and raises people to new heroic deeds. But the Far East invites only the brave, the decisive—those who are not afraid of difficulties."

The executive committee of the U. S. S. R. augmented the plea with an appeal for women engineers, technicians, mechanics, statistical experts, physicians, teachers, telegraph operators, cooks, typists, stenographers, bookkeepers and dressmakers.

Court Plan Before Okla. Democrats

Oklahoma City, May 2 (AP).—The Oklahoma Democratic central committee gathered here tonight, but whether it would take any action tomorrow on a recent resolution of the General Federation of Women's Clubs opposing the Roosevelt court reorganization plan remained problematical.

The federation's council indorsed a resolution opposing the judiciary plan last week in Tulsa.

Mrs. John G. Catlett, Oklahoma national committeewoman, whose criticism of the federation's resolution brought a compliment from National Democratic Chairman James Farley, could not be reached.

Sam Battles, Oklahoma Democratic chairman, said the committee likely would indorse Roosevelt's court plan and approve his Administration.

Manchukuo Protests.

Hsinking, Manchukuo, May 2 (U.P.). The foreign office today filed a protest with the Soviet consul general in Harbin alleging two Russian soldiers crossed into Manchukuo and kidnaped a farmer.

Pulitzer Prizemen To Be Announced

New York, May 2 (AP).—Winners of the 1936 Pulitzer awards in journalism and letters will be announced tomorrow night by Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University and chairman of the committee which selected the winners last Friday.

Continuing a precedent, the committee will not notify those selected for the awards until formal announcement of the selections is made at 9 p. m. The Pulitzer prizes, first awarded in 1917, now represent an annual award of $15,500, divided into ten prizes, five each in journalism and letters. In addition five traveling scholarships are provided for outstanding students of journalism, art and music.

Krueger Praised In Vienna Debut

Vienna, May 2 (AP).—Karl Krueger, conductor of the Kansas City Philharmonic Orchestra, drew high praise today when he directed the Vienna Philharmonic.

The Vienna Philharmonic president said, "He gave us a new conception of music conducting."

On the basis of the concert, the Kansas City conductor was offered engagements in Budapest, where he is directing May 6 and in Praha and Paris.

Robert Kolisko, Vienna opera director, said, "Krueger showed unusual technique, clear phrasing and sound musicianship with thoughtful interpretation."

Girl Aerialist Injured Critically in Theater

Los Angeles, May 2 (AP).—Marloe Staples, 20, trapeze performer, crashed 30 feet to the floor of a theater today, suffering a skull fracture and broken neck which doctors said probabaly would prove fatal.

Concluding an "iron jaw" stunt in which she held by her teeth to a leather strap as she whirled swiftly, she suddenly fell. Other vaudeville players were so unnerved they canceled the day's show.

$200,000 Warehouse Fire.

Knox, Pa., May 2 (AP).—A $200,000 fire destroyed a warehouse of the Knox Glass Bottle Co. today. Four volunteer firemen were injured as the blaze swept the three-story building which spread over more than 20,000 square feet of land.

Mrs. Groome Rites Set Tomorrow

Mrs. Cora Broadfield Grooms, 77, Greensboro, N. C., died early yesterday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Frank R. McNinch, 3 Washington drive, Westmoreland Hills, Md., following a long illness.

Mrs. Groome, suffering from a heart ailment, had come to Washington to be with her daughter. She had been here a week.

She is survived by three daughters, Mrs. J. J. Love, of Washington; Mrs. E. R. Doughtie, of Los Angeles, and Mrs. Frank R. McNinch.

NOTICE: To Participants in OLD GOLD'S $200,000.00 Contest

BEWARE OF CONTEST "TIPSTERS"!

Don't put your money or your trust in those "dope sheets" claiming to give the solutions to the Old Gold puzzles

IN EVERY important prize contest persons step forward offering to sell contestants solutions, answers and advice. This has happened in the OLD GOLD $200,000.00 PUZZLE CONTEST. Solutions to the OLD GOLD Puzzles are being offered for sale in various parts of the country.

We want to emphasize that P. Lorillard Company is in no way responsible for such solutions, and that the persons offering such solutions to the puzzles have no connection with this Company nor any inside knowledge as to the correct answers.

The contestant who blindly buys and uses such solutions may well throw away his chances in the contest.

Play fair with yourself and with other contestants. Trust your own skill rather than tipsters.

This advertisement is published in a spirit of fairness to all who are participating in the OLD GOLD CONTEST.
